LEARN WHAT Editor Coblentz reports as "latest political dope from Washington." You need not believe it, but this is how it goes:

"Coolidge for President, Hoover for Vice-President. Coolidge to resign at the end of two years, after serving as President for exactly eight years, or two full terms."

President Coolidge, spending his summer vacation in Wisconsin, reminds you of Ruth, only, unlike Ruth, President Coolidge, "amid the alien corn," and middle western farmers, will defy criticism of his McNary-Haugen veto. Every farmer will admit that the President has the strength of his convictions, and farmers like that.

"The ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master's crib." And some of our educators, newspaper owners, editors and book publishers also know their master's crib, and eat at it.

One professor in Pennsylvania told the Federal Trade Commission in Washington yesterday that he had been paid $250 apiece for three lectures on public utilities.

The professor was not doing "under cover work" for Pennsylvania utility corporations. The corporations, it seems, simply wanted to eliminate incorrect opinions about their business.

The bootleg and bandit business grow and improve hand in hand.

"Don't make a squawk or we'll kill you." That was the first command of bandits, holding up the Broadmoor Country Club near Indianapolis.

"Throw the glass and the dough in the sack," was the second command, when the bandits lined up against the wall two hundred ladies and gentlemen enjoying a dance. "The glass" meant diamonds and other jewelry. Collectors of "glass and dough" made their getaway.

Will Rogers is nominated for President by Charles Dana Gibson and his able son, Langhorne Gibson, in their publication, "Life."

Rogers, who says he "chews to run," calls his a "bunkless campaign," and "the nomination leaves me dazed, and if I can stay dazed, I ought to make a splendid candidate."

Will Rogers is young, and doesn't realize how much truth there is in that.

An election to the presidency dazes a man so thoroughly that it takes him about four years to get over it. And by that time they are thinking about another candidate.

Favorite sons of various States will meet at the Republican convention angry, because their States have been "invaded" by Herbert Hoover.

Those favorite sons won't be as angry as the professional politicians.

There is profit in trading one favorite son against another, or trading all of them for a consideration when the time comes. When favorite sons fade away, politicians' profits fade also.

A child seven years old is kidnaped in Ohio and killed under horrible circumstances.

The murder of that little girl is another achievement of our bootlegging age. Charles J. Hoppe, with a wife and one-year-old child, whom, police say, confessed the killing, says he was "full of bootleg whiskey and my recollection of the killing is vague."

Something ought to be done

FLIERS ARE GREETED IN HONOLULU

Wheeler Field, Honolulu, June 1 (AP)—The transpacific monoplane Southern Cross, bearing four men, came safely to earth here today at 12:19 p. m. Pacific coast time (4:19 Boston time), after 24400-mile flight from Oakland, Cal., begun at 8:51 a. m. (12:51 Boston time) yesterday.

DOLLAR LINER BRINGING SURVIVORS IN CRASH TO BOSTON

The President Garfield of the Dollar line, which sank freighter Kershaw a few hours out of Boston, with loss of possibly ten or a dozen lives. The collision took place off East Chop, Martha's Vineyard. The Garfield is bringing 30 survivors to Boston.

STEAMER KERSHAW IS LOST OFF CAPE

From seven to twelve men were drowned today in the waters off East Chop, Martha's Vineyard, when the round-the-world passenger liner President Garfield rammed and sank the Merchants' and Miners' steamer Kershaw, bound from Boston to Norfolk, Va.

Thirty survivors were picked up and are being brought to Boston by the President Garfield, which was on route here from New York when the crash occurred. They will be landed at the Hoosac docks, Charlestown.

The Garfield is badly damaged on her bow, but above the waterline, and the vessel was in no danger in good weather.

The Kershaw, with a crew of 37 or more, the exact number not being known, and with no passengers, was only a few hours out of Boston when sunk.

The ships came together about three miles off East Chop and a mile and a half west of Hedge Fence lightship, an hour after midnight on a night so placid that the crash of the two vessels was heard ashore.

Miss Cora Fisher, sitting in an automobile near Vineyard Haven, was an eye-witness of the collision, seeing the two sets of lights which she had been watching closely mingle together as the crash was heard.

WASHBURN CANDIDATE UNLESS BUTLER RUNS

Robert M. Washburn, president of the Roosevelt Club, announced today his candidacy for Republican nomination for United States Senator.

Only for ex-Senator William M. Butler will he step out of the battle area, Washburn declared in placing himself in the lists and he asserted also his belief that Butler could defeat Senator David I Walsh this year.

Washburn's candidacy was announced without his waiting for the unofficial state-wide conference, June 30, at which the strongest candidate to oppose Walsh was supposed to be "suggested."

"It is high time that the party awoke to the exigencies of the situation," said Washburn in his announcement. "Apathy prevails, and a drifting which is a symbol of destruction. It is high time that someone announced his candidacy for this seat."

READING IS FOUND TO BE GUILTY

Atty.-Gen. Arthur K. Reading was found guilty of misconduct and maladministration in office and his impeachment was recommended in the report of the legislative investigating committee filed in the House of Representatives today.

The committee in its report included a resolution for impeachment for adoption by the House.

Of the four issues presented in evidence before the committee, Reading was cleared of culpability in two—the Florida Land Enterprises and the Cattle Fraud papers.

In both the Decimo Club and the L. A. W. transactions, the attorney-

MAN DYING, GIRL HURT AS AUTO SWIPES TRUCK

One man is dying, a girl was injured and an auto and truck damaged today in a crash at A and Melcher sts., South Boston.

Daniel J. Crowley, 66, of Fisher ave., Roxbury, was taken to City Hospital where his name was placed on the danger list. He was struck by the auto operated by Frank Connelissen, chauffeur for Dr. Charles Mackey of Broadway, according to the police.

In swerving, the auto collided with a truck, throwing Alice Maloney, 19, of East Second st., South Boston, against the side of the auto. She was a passenger with Connelissen. Lacerations over her right eye required hospital treatment.

Cemetery Worker and 2 Near Death in Crash

Michael F. Morrissey, Medford cemetery worker, and two companions were injured, possibly fatally, today, when the automobile in which they were riding struck a tree and overturned on Craft's Hill, Manchester-by-the-Sea, on the road to Gloucester.

The three men were picked up unconscious by Chief of Police George R. Dean of Manchester and rushed to the Beverly Hospital, where two of them were said to be in a critical condition.

Thomas Ryan, one of the five defendant waiters of the Hotel Ritz of Columbus ave., on trial in Suffolk Superior Criminal Court charged with selling liquor, testified today he went outside the hotel and procured liquor for Raymond L. Perry, agent for the Watch and Ward Society.

Ryan, who said he had been a waiter in the best hotels of Boston, declared he purchased the liquor from a bootlegger and that Perry gave him a tip of $2.

Questioned by Atty Robert J. Gallagher, defence counsel, Ryan denied selling any liquor in the hotel.

"Mr. Perry and his wife came to the rathskeller about February 1," said the witness. "They ordered food and Mr. Perry asked me if there was anything cold to drink. I said:

For Time o' Day Call CAPitol 1000

On and after June 1, you may learn the correct time by calling CAPitol 1000. The information is available twenty-four hours a day.

Such calls will be charged for like any other call to a down-town Boston telephone. There will be no additional fee for the information.

Long ago, because it interfered with their regular work, we had to abandon the practice whereby switchboard operators gave out the time.

The demand still persists; and in order to measure and meet it, a special bureau, CAPitol 1000, has been established. Calls for the time, answered through this special bureau, will not interefere with the regular work of switchboard operators.

Continuance of this bureau depends on its value to the public as shown by its use.

HUB LINER IS SUNK IN CRASH WHILE OFF MARTHA'S VINEYARD

SEA TRAGEDY IS MARKED BY THRILLING RESCUES

Misunderstanding of signals is believed to have been the cause, for the vessels bespoke each other shortly before the accident. The sea was smooth and the sky clear.

The President Garfield, owned by the Dollar Line, was reported making 14 knots when it struck the Kershaw on the latter's port side, just forward of the bridge.

The freighter rolled over but remained on the surface for a few moments while the big liner's prow was in its side. Then the Kershaw broke free and went to the bottom within ten minutes in 80 feet of water.

LEAP INTO THE SEA

Many of the crew of the freighter saved themselves by leaping to the deck of the liner, while others hurled themselves into the sea and fought desperately to prevent themselves being sucked under as the Kershaw sank.

The masterly seamanship of the man at the wheel of the President Garfield, in holding the prow of the big liner in the gaping hole in the side of the freighter, gave these men time to leap clear of the doomed vessel.

They were picked up by members of the crew of the liner who put out in four boats.

No trace of those reported missing could be found, although the search by the liner's crew lasted for several hours.

Coast Guards in three patrol boats dispatched from the Woods Hole base by Commander Fred A. Nichols continued the search for the missing or their bodies, but their hunt was equally unsuccessful.

While the boats were being lowered from the Garfield, inspection was made of the liner's own wounds. It was found that by releasing the fuel from the forward leasing the bow would lift high enough to keep the water from entering through the crushed plates.

Men from Vineyard Haven aided in the rescues, speeding to the scene in a launch after hearing the crash. This launch was used to tow the lifeboats with survivors back to the liner after the strong tide scattered them.

PROCEEDS TO BOSTON

Three of these Vineyard Haveners, Capt. George H. Moir, Ernest Hutchinson and Dr. Lee J. Hand, were eating a "midnight supper" in a cafe when the sound of the collision sent them running to the shore.

They got Capt. Stanley Fisher, his sons, George and Meredith, and Raymond Baptiste, and put out in Capt. Fisher's boat, the Leona. Dr. Hand, who is director of the Marine Hospital at the Haven, treated the men pulled out of the water.

Placing a buoy to mark the spot, the President Garfield proceeded to Vineyard Haven Harbor and anchored. At 7 o'clock it weighed anchor and was off for Boston and is due to reach here at 4 this afternoon.

The list of the crew of the Kershaw, the only list available, sank with the vessel. According to officers of the Merchants and Miners Line, the men sign articles aboard the ship at the start of each trip and therefore a duplicate list is not available ashore.

A coastal pilot, Ralph W. C. Smith of New York City, was at the wheel of the President Garfield at the time of the collision.

Capt. G. H. Moir, who boarded the President Garfield, reported the following members of the crew of the Kershaw aboard her:

Capt. Brooks.
Chief Engineer John Dawson.
Second Officer E. Rowe.
Third Officer H. E. Calis.
First Assistant Engineer A. R. T. Gotwall.
Third Assistant Engineer Fred Lewis.
Boatswain Gus Marris.
Quartermaster Louis Knight.
Quartermaster John A. Hudking.

Telegrams from relatives of the crew of the Kershaw began arriving at the Boston offices of the Merchants & Miners line before noon, with inquiries regarding the kin of the senders.

Officials of this line, as well as those of the Dollar line, asked Coast Guards to continue the search for survivors.

The names of those "missing" would not be definitely known, according to spokesmen for the Merchants & Miners, until the President Garfield docks.

The liner had just completed a cruise around the world, the last leg of which was from Marseilles to New York, and was bringing three passengers to Boston, after which it was scheduled to return to New York to commence another world tour.

At first the captain of the Garfield thought that all of the crew of the Kershaw were saved and he so radiod. A check-up among the survivors showed that a number were missing and this information was transmitted to the Coast Guard boats in the vicinity.

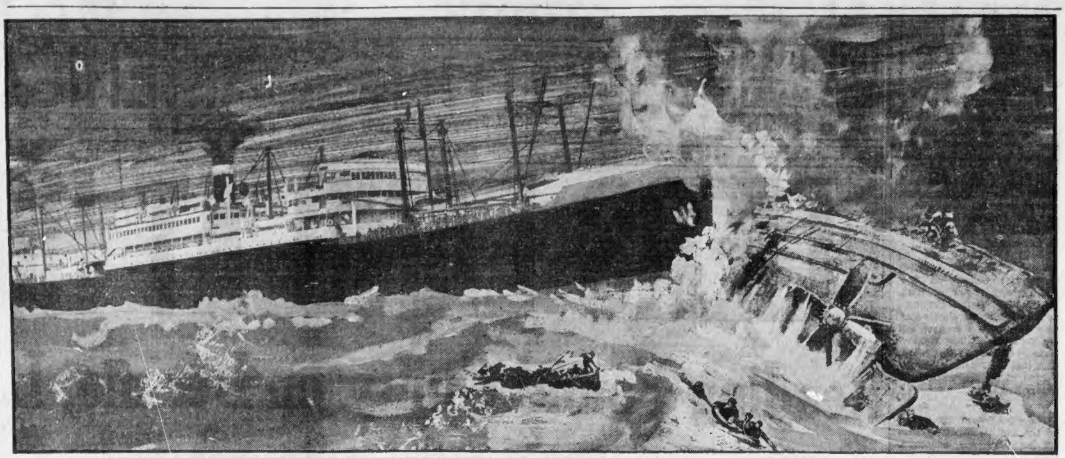
The Coast Guard base at Woods Hole was first notified of the collision within a few minutes of the time it occurred.

The President Garfield ran aground only a short distance from the scene of today's disaster, in August, 1925, but was refloated without serious consequences.

The Kershaw was formerly in the passenger service, but while being reconditioned in 1920 caught fire and sank at her pier. She was afterward converted into a freight carrier for the Boston-Norfolk run.

The President Garfield was in charge of Capt. Albert Wilson, according to local offices of the Dollar line. The vessel is 10,558 gross tons, 502 feet long, with 62-foot beam, and was bringing 1800 tons of cargo to Boston from Mediterranean ports, in addition to the three passengers.

The Kershaw was 282 feet in length, 42 feet wide and 16 feet above the keel, 2741 gross tonnage and 1854 net tonnage.



DRAWING DEPICTS THE FATAL COLLISION TODAY AT MARTHA'S VINEYARD BETWEEN BOSTON SHIPS

Sketched by Boston Evening American Staff Artist W. Kolliker from dispatches telling of the collision between the Dollar liner President Garfield, bound for Boston, and the M. & M. line freighter Kershaw, outbound from Boston, at Martha's Vineyard today. In a few moments the Kershaw sank. The Garfield is bringing 30 survivors to Boston. The collision is unexplained. The sea was calm and there was no excessive wind. Loss of life estimates range at from seven to a dozen and exact toll may never be definitely known.

MESSAGES TOLD CHEERILY OF FLIGHT OVER PACIFIC

finally of being lost. The story is dramatically told in these bulletins:]

Honolulu, June 1 (AP)—The Mutual Wireless Company reported that the Southern Cross flashed this message: "Sighted land" at 6:35 a. m. (9:05 a. m. Pacific time) or 1:05 p. m. Boston daylight-saving time.

The aviators at 6:51 a. m. 9:20 Pacific time) radioed:

"These clouds are fooling us. We thought he had sighted land, but guess not. We can stay up four hours more. 4We have been up 21 hours and 25 binutes now. A batteries are down; can't receive anything."

Soon the Southern Cross radioed.

"Guess we are lost. Radio A battery went down. Please get ship with receiver. Get our bearing on my 740 wave. Will keep going so they can track us."

The second message came 26 minutes after the one from the Southern Cross flashing the tense words "sighted land." It meant that the watchers ashore must curb their impatience while for the men aboard the Southern Cross, watching the gauge which marked the diminishing supply of gasoline, it meant anxious peering ahead to discern the lofty peaks of Oahu island on which they plan to bring their land plane to rest.

The crowd got the first thrill of the morning when Martin Jensen in the monoplane Aloha, with which he won second place in last summer's Dole flight race from California, appeared through the morning haze. There was a rush to the ropes at the edge of the field, by the crowd of about 500.

The mists rolled away, melted by the warm sun of Hawaii. All was prepared for the welcome to the four brave men, nearing the end of their 2400-mile flight. Heading the welcomers was Governor Wallace R. Farrington of Hawaii.

How Story of Flight Reached San Francisco

San Francisco, June 1 (AP)—The Radio Corporation of America reported receipt of a message from the monoplane Southern Cross at 5:12 a. m. today (9 a. m., Boston time), saying: "All well. Still shooting on all three."

At 4:30 a. m., the Radio Corporation reported receipt of a message addressed to the Associated Press. The message said:

"Expect to be in Honolulu 9:50 a. m. (Presumably Pacific coast time.) Elevation now 4500 feet. Clouds, but nice moon. Chilly, but not bad."

The hour of arrival, allowing for daylight saving time, would be about 2 o'clock Boston time.

At 4:31 Lieut. Lyon, navigator, messaged the Associated Press radio station in San Francisco:

"All O. K. 4:30 a. m. (Pacific time), 500 miles to go."

Through the long hours the four aviators, two Australians and two Americans, remained cheerful despite the strain of piloting their craft high above the sea.

Their messages, some of them personal, repeated over and over that everything was "O. K.," described the sunset with the gorgeous light effects on the clouds below, and the opal dusk which held the plane in its arms after the sun had disappeared into the western ocean.

The plane sent a message at 10:05 o'clock last night saying a downward current had caused her to lose some altitude, and then maintained silence for more than an hour. The first definite news that she had survived the plunge was given out by the San Francisco Examiner, which said the newspaper's private station had heard the plane's radio calling but was unable to get the message.

Inability to understand the plane's radio was attributed to interference by the army radio station at Leavenworth, Kan.

The radio messages revealed that the two Australians, Capts. Charles Kingsford-Smith and Charles T. P. Ulm, pilots, and the two Americans, James Warner, radio operator, and Lieut. Harry Lyon, navigator, had maintained the confidence they expressed before starting.

It was Warner who kept the world informed of the plane's flight, while Lyon navigated the tri-motored Fokker, "shooting stars" now and then, Warner reported, to get their position.

The Southern Cross hopped off from Oakland Airport yesterday at 8:51 a. m. or 12:51 p. m. Boston daylight saving time, with the flight to Honolulu the first leg of a projected 7788-mile flight to Sydney, Australia, by way of Hawaii and the Fiji Islands.

Australia Flight Stories Exclusively in Hearst Papers

Full details of the 7788-mile flight planned by Capt. Kingsford-Smith and Pilot C. Ulm will be given exclusively to the Hearst newspapers, which are backing the ambitious hop.

The men of the Southern Cross, who started their air journey from San Francisco with Honolulu as their immediate objective, planned to reach the Fiji Islands, and ultimately Brisbane and Sydney, Australia. They will give complete stories to readers of the Hearst newspapers.

"Will Be in Australia Soon," Pilot Radios Home

London, June 1 (AP)—Frequent wireless messages are being received in Australia from the two Australians in the Southern Cross, says a Sydney dispatch to the Evening News.

One message from Capt. Kingsford-Smith said: "Everything fine with us. Convey our love to father and mother. We hope to be with them soon."

Wilkins Meets Hindenburg

Berlin, June 1 (AP)—Capt. George Wilkins and Lieut. Carl Eielson were received by President Von Hindenburg today and told him all about their flight from Alaska to Spitzbergen.

26 REGIMENTS REVIEWED BY GOVERNOR

Eight Boston schoolboy cadets were treated for injuries today on Boston Common at the end of the annual street parade.

The boys treated at the Red Cross tent set up on the Common had but slight hurts, however, and these were sustained during a period of larking between the ending of the parade and the official review.

In the line of march today were 26 regiments totalling more than 15,000 cadets, and they were cheered on by flag-waving fathers, mothers, sisters and girls of the co-ed schools.

Forming in the streets near English high school the parade wound through Clarendon and Stuart sts., Columbus ave., Boylston, Tremont, Park and Beacon sts. to the Common.

The cadets were reviewed at the State House by Governor Fuller and his youngest son, Peter; the Governor's staff, ex-Mayor James M. Curley; Lieut-Gen. and Mrs. Edward L. Logan, Superintendent of Schools Jeremiah Burke and Gen. Clarence R. Edwards, among others.

On Boston Common the cadets were reviewed by the official Boston group headed by President Thomas H. Green of the City Council, representing Mayor Nichols.

Lieut.-Col. Charles A. Ranlett, the chief cadet military instructor, was chief of staff and in military command of the parade. The cadet major-general in command of the line

24 EXECUTIVES ARE PLACED ON ONE FACULTY

Washington, June 1 — Electric power interests run riot in the colleges and universities of Colorado, boasting that they have 24 utility company executives on one faculty and paying out thousands of dollars to professors, according to evidence before the Federal Trade Commission.

"A splendid contact" with "all the institutions of higher education" in Colorado, New Mexico and Wyoming was claimed in one letter placed in record in the commission's investigation of the so-called power trust.

Censorship of the "tendencies" and "intellectual leanings" of educators coming to join the faculty of the University of Colorado was shown in letters from the files of the Rocky Mountain Committee on Public Utility Information.

This committee paid half the salary of Hubert P. Wolfe, a utilities research fellow of the University of Colorado delegated to study the "economic aspects" of the Boulder Dam project.

This project, calling for construction of a great flood control, irrigation and power dam at Boulder Canyon on the Colorado river, has been blocked by the power lobby in the last two sessions of Congress.

George E. Lewis, committee director, "rather imagined" that Wolfe was a member of the Colorado fact-finding committee, appointed by his university to study the bearing of the dam upon the state's future.

In any event, he testified, the committee would be likely to use

CHILDREN GRIEVE FOR MISSING WHITE DOG

Children who play in Joseph st., Dorchester, are mourning the loss of a playmate—a white Siberian samoyed dog owned by Daniel Phillips of 8 Joseph st. The dog is pure white with a fluffy coat, in appearance resembling an Eskimo husky. She is six months old and answers to the name of Trixy. Her friendliness for children or her penchant for riding in automobiles may have lured her away from home on Tuesday, her master believes. He has offered a reward.

BATHING SUITS ALL WET, SOME SCORCHED IN BLAZE

Hundreds of bathing suits were wet during a fire in the building at 286 Devonshire st., occupied as a storehouse for bathing suits by the J. W. Brine Co. Damage to the suits and to the storage rooms on the first and second floors is set at $5000. The fire is believed to have started from spontaneous combustion.

MRS. SEARS SOON TO BE BACK IN HUB, SAYS BETTY ALDEN

Miss Alice C. Kimball Miss Elaine Stewart

BOSTON SOCIETY GIRLS FREQUENTLY SEEN AT HORSE SHOWS

TALL SHIPS COME SAILING INTO PORT BRINGING WITH EACH VOYAGE CERTAIN superlatively important Bostonians given to gadabout ways. Very soon, within a few days in fact, Mrs. J. Montgomery Sears will probably be on home soil once more, since her name is inscribed in the passenger list of the Ile de France and that futuristic sea-going hotel is due at her New York dock some time next week. Mrs. Sears goes abroad with a regularity similar to the season's changing, but of a greater frequency.

MRS. GEORGE VON L. MEYER, the senior to bear the name, comes home also next week. At least, her plans call for passage westward via the Conte Biancamano, and that steamship is already plowing her way here. I believe the Donna Brambilla accompanies her mother, Mrs. Meyer, on the journey hither. It has been Mrs. Meyer's custom and pleasure to live much abroad in recent years. Specially does she find the winters in foreign climes much to her liking, as well as the social life in favorite Continental capitals.

THE PARIS HAS A BOSTON list of flattering importance. That steamship is outbound at midnight tonight, and has on board from Cambridge Prof. Jean Jaques Haffner and Mme. Haffner, with their daughters, Mlle. Monique and Mlle. Antoinette Haffner. Every summer time do the Haff[illegible] sail away to spend several months in the homeland. Their party includes Mme. Mathilde Pierre and Mlle. Helene Pierre. Prof. Haffner is one of the Harvard College staff, guiding the scholastic destinies of certain of that university's bright young men.

VIA THE PARIS ALI BEY E. YAHIA and his dark-eyed and attractive wife take their transatlantic passage en route to Alexandria. The Yahias have been making an extended stay in town, with headquarters at the Hotel Sheraton, and their own car, brought half way around the globe from Egypt. It is business primarily that brings Mr. Yahia here, and it is an annual pilgrimage. Mme. Yahia, French, petite, and charmingly Parisienne in frocks and manners, has been making her second Boston visit.

THE ORANGE BLOSSOM scented motif woven through June's pattern is this year more than ordinarily arresting. Certain intercity alliances serve to introduce the welcome variant, because the local set's interest is keen whenever Boston youth or maiden looks otherwhere for a life mate. Smart Chicago and important Boston share interest in Miss Alice Rand's marriage with Alexis de Tarnowsky. And smart Chicago in numbers will board the Twentieth Century one day soon for Boston and the nuptials of Miss Rand and young Mr. De Tarnowsky.

DR. AND MRS. GEORGE DE TARNOWSKY, of the Windy City, are parents to the bridegroom-elect. Miss Rand is the daughter of Mrs. George Fillmore Swain of Brookline. The De Tarnowsky Chicago circle is distinguished, as is the bride's family here in town. De Tarnowsky prestige in Chicago and Rand-Swain importance here in town imbue the ceremonial with distinction, even though it does occur on a June Saturday supremely sportive. It is a courageous bride whose wedding cards read "June 16," in this year of grace and race meets.

THE VERY PRETTIEST SORT of bride attendant is Miss Susan Hammond, graceful as a sapling and rose-leaf cheeked. When on Saturday next her brother, Samuel Hammond, Jr., takes unto himself a wife Miss Hammond in the church processional will be distinctly an asset, since she contributes radiance and individuality to such a scene. The Hammond family started for Alabama and the bride's home last Tuesday. Miss Isabel Towson Alleyn is to be the future Mrs. Hammond, Jr.

MISS ALLEYN IS THE DAUGHTER of Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Alleyn, whose home is in Sheffield, Ala. Loving friends and doting relatives are bestrewing the pre-nuptial days with festal occasions, and the Boston contingent arrives in ample season for all the gayety. The bride-elect, after her coming out, successfully stormed the halls of learning at Wellesley and got her degree at that college in 1925. Mr. Hammond is Harvard, 1923, having followed paternal example in matriculating at the Cambridge college.

Judge Wilford D. Gray, Jr., was assigned today to sit at the trial of Frederick Hinman Knowlton, Framingham business man, charged with the murder of Marguerite Stewart, Beverly teacher, whose body was found beside the Cambridge turnpike in Concord.

TAMMANY HEAD, FACING GRILL, GOES FISHING

New York, June 1 (AP)—The Senate presidential campaign funds investigating committee issued subponaes today for George W. Olvany, leader of Tammany Hall, and Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City.

The committee was informed that Mr. Olvany had left town yesterday on a fishing trip and would not be in New York before Monday. No return had been received today on the subpoena issued for Oscar Miller, chairman of the Albany Civic League. His name was furnished yesterday to the committee by Senator Heflin, Alabama.

SCHOOL CADETS DO THEIR BIT of march was Cadet Col. James T. Lynch of Brighton high school, who won that honor through winning first prize in the indoor competition May 18.

Cadet brigade commanders were Cadet Brig.-Gens. Arthur Marklis of Hyde Park high school, 1st brigade; Richard Visignani of East Boston high school, 2nd brigade; Robert B. Buckley of Boston Latin, 3rd brigade, and Nathan N. Challant of Dorchester High, 4th brigade.

Participation of the grammar school boys this year was their first and was in the nature of an experiment.

The order of march was as follows: English high school, three regiments; Dorchester high school, three regiments; Boston Latin school, two regiments; Charlestown high, Jamaica Plain high, Brighton high, East Boston high, South Boston high and Hyde Park high school, one regiment each in that order; High School of Commerce, two regiments; Boston Trade school, one regiment; Mechanic Arts high

Then, in order, came the third intermediate school cadet regiment made up of cadets from the Oliver Wendell Holmes, Frank V. Thompson, Henry L. Pierce and Grover Cleveland grade schools; the first intermediate regiment of cadets from the Abraham Lincoln, Donald McKay, Joseph H. Barnes, Washington-Allston, Michael Angelo, Bennett and Washington grade schools and the second intermediate regiment of cadets from the Robert Gould Shaw, Washington Irving, Theodore Roosevelt, Lewis, John Winthrop and Bigelow grade schools.

The cadets were reviewed at the State House by Governor Fuller and his youngest son, Peter; the Governor's staff, ex-Mayor James M. Curley, Lieut.-Gen. and Mrs. Edward L. Logan, Supt. of Schools Jeremiah Burke and Gen. Clarence R. Edwards, among others.

On Boston Common the cadets were reviewed by an official Boston group headed by Pres. Thomas H. Green of the City Council, representing Mayor Nichols.

WOMAN SICK IN BED SEES MAN LOOT HOME

Powerless to protest except by voice as she lay sick in bed, Mrs. Samuel Baer of Seaver st., Roxbury, today watched a thief ransack her apartment while he pointed a threatening gun at her head.

"He demanded money," she told the officers, "and when I told him I had none he went through closets and generally ransacked the apartment." With a last threat to make no outcry he left the apartment. Mrs. Baer was unable to determine the quantity of articles taken.

SOMERVILLE MAN, 74, DIES IN HOUSE WHERE BORN

After an illness of three months, Arthur Pierce Vinal died in Somerville today in the house in which he was born 74 years ago. Vinal was a life-long resident of the city and formerly active in politics there, having served in the Common Council, as president of the board of aldermen and as a representative. Until eight years ago he was engaged in the lumber business in Charlestown. He was unmarried and is survived by two sisters. Funeral services will be held Monday at the home.

SAYS HE BOUGHT RUM FOR PERRY FOR A $2 TIP

ginger ale or near beer.' Mr. Perry ordered two bottles of near beer.

THEY HAD A LITTLE TALK

"When I brought them to the table he engaged me in conversation. Says he: "'You look like a good harp.' 'I am,' says I. 'Well, so am I,' says he. 'I got a little cold. There isn't a chance of getting a pint, is there?'

"'There's no chance here,' I says, 'but you can go outside and get it. There's a bootlegger on every corner.'

"Well, Mr. Perry he said he didn't know the bootleggers and they didn't know him. So I said I couldn't go out then for it. Then he asked me how much they got around there for liquor and I said $5.

"When he left the room Mr. Perry gave me $5 and said: 'If you get a chance get me a pint.' Later when I got the chance out I go. I walked a couple of blocks down the street and got a pint. It was all wrapped up in tissue paper and when I gave it to Mr. Perry he gave me a $2 tip."

Ryan testified that at 8 p. m., February 5, when he is also charged with selling liquor to Perry, he was off duty and at home with his wife and eight children.

Under cross-examination by Dist. Atty. Joseph Scolponeti, the witness said he did not know any bootleggers by name.

TELLS OF MEETING

John Sullivan, proprietor of the hotel, testifying for the defense, told of an early morning meeting with Nicholas J. Cockinos, chief investigator for the Watch and Ward Society.

Sullivan's promptness in answering questions asked by Defense Attorney Robert J. Gallagher, brought an emphatic protest from Asst. Dist. Atty. Joseph Scolponeti, with the result that this line of questioning was excluded.

"During the month of April, about 4 o'clock one morning, did you by appointment meet Mr. Cockinos on Massachusets ave., near Albany st.?" Attorney Gallagher asked.

"Yes,' 'the witness replied.

"Were steps taken to eliminate witnesses?"

The witness replied, "Yes" as Asst. Dist. Atty. Scolponeti was getting to his feet to object.

Judge Hayes excluded the question and warned the witness not to answer when the district attorney stood up to object.

"Was a request made by Mr. Cockinos for a substantial sum of money?" Atty. Gallagher continued. Again the witness replied "Yes," and again the question was excluded.

"Had you been in touch with the Boston police department in connection with this matter?" "Yes."

"Were you in communication with Mr. Cockinos, April 11, 16 and 17?" "Yes."

SAW GIN AND RYE.

The next witness was Russell O. Quinton, chief bellman at the Bay State Hotel in Worcester in October of 1927, when Perry, to whom the five Ritz waiters are alleged to have sold liquor, was a guest at that house.

Quinton testified he went to Perry's room nine or ten times a week during the month Perry was there, and saw gin, rye and bourbon there in bottles.

"I saw High and Dry gin, Overholt rye and Bourbon," said the witness.

Rene Legase of the Bay State Hotel said he was with Perry on several parties in Worcester, and that Perry was unable to work for a week after one of them. Legase said he was no longer friendly with Perry as he understood Perry "was persecuting Mr. Sullivan."

Cockinos denied he had met Sullivan early in the morning at Massachusetts ave. and Albany st. He said he made arrangements over the telephone to see Sullivan, but it was on official business.

Drunk at State House Tries to Horn in on Rum Probe

A real honest-to-goodness inebriated gentleman was discovered at the State House today. He was wandering about the corridors evidently in search of a spot to lie down.

"Where you going?" Watchman Henry Noyes accosted him.

"Wall (hic) I read in the (hic) papers about the rum probe (hic) at the State House. 'N here I am."

There he was, rather, for Watchman Noyes showed him the door.

"That didn't require any investigating committee," Noyes remarked.

According to Chief Dean, the cause of the accident was not determined, but it is believed to have occurred when Morrissey, who was driving, lost control of the car and it shot across the road, crashing into a tree.

The heavy car was demolished and its three occupants were thrown out. Morrissey, who lives in Winthrop st., Medford, was identified by Supt. Tutten, in whose car he was taken to the hospital, while Chief Dean took the others.

POLICE SEIZE GUNS HERE TO BLOCK "TONG WAR"

Acting on a "tip" that munitions were stored in the building in preparation for a tong war, the police headquarters vice and liquor squad raided an address in Albany st., finding a pistol, revolver, shotgun, cartridges, a still and two gallons of "moonshine."

Ung Get Hong, 32, in whose room the munitions and still were alleged to have been found, was arrested on a charge of illegally manufacturing liquor. According to the police the cartridges found all had had the slugs notched in "dum dum" fashion.

FIND READING GUILTY IN DECIMO CLUB AND L. A. W. CASES

general was declared guilty of misconduct and maladministration.

IN DECIMO CLUB CASE

In its conclusions in the Decimo Club case, the committee reported:

"The committee finds that in entering the employment of the Decimo Club under conditions and circumstances as herein found by the committee and in the acceptance of $25,000, as found to have been to him paid, and his participations in the false and fictitious transactions relating to the said payment, as found by the committee, Mr. Reading was guilty of misconduct and maladministration in his office as attorney-general of Massachusetts in that he wilfully, wrongfully and corruptly and for his own profit and emolument brought the administration of justice in this Commonwealth into discredit and disrepute and degraded and defamed the dignity, integrity and authority of the office of attorney-general of this Commonwealth and thereby impaired and destroyed public confidence in the administration of that office, and thereby wilfully, wrongfully and corruptly prostituted his official power and influence for the purpose of securing benefits to himself."

L. A. W. TRANSACTIONS.

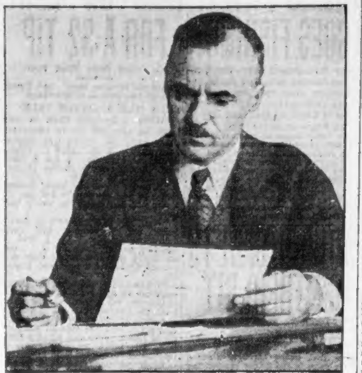
The committee's conclusions regarding Reading's participation in the L. A. W. transactions were as follows:

"Mr. Reading was and is guilty of misconduct and maladministration in his office as Attorney-General of Massachusetts in that he wilfully, wrongfully and corruptly and for his own profit and emolument brought the administration of justice in this Commonwealth into discredit and disrepute and degraded and defamed the dignity, integrity and authority of the office of Attorney-General of this Commonwealth and thereby impaired and destroyed public confidence in the administration of that office and thereby wilfully, wrongfully and corruptly prostituted his official power and influence for the purpose of securing benefits to himself and his private clients."

CATTLE FRAUD PAPERS

Regarding the cattle fraud papers, the committee reported, "that such loss or displacement, together with the rediscovery of these papers, was due to the negligence and disregard of responsibility incident to the custody of the Attorney-General's office of papers known to be of vital importance. . . . The committee is unable to determine to what extent Mr. Reading had knowledge either of the custody, the care or the use of these papers . . . and therefore makes no finding of culpability other than that there was reprehensible negligence . . ."

The committee found such negligence "attributable to a lack of responsible attention on the part of the assistants of the attorney-general."



ATTY.-GEN. ARTHUR K. READING

Going into the Decimo Club case, the committee found "that in the conversation of May 27 Mr. Reading intended to give the impression to the Websters, representing the club that he was available for employment by it and that he would accept such employment if offered to him."

"The committee finds that Mr. Reading intended from wrongful and corrupt motives to conceal and withhold from the public and the officials of the Commonwealth the fact that he had entered or intended to enter the service of the Decimo Club.

CONCEALED HIS EMPLOYMENT

"The committee further finds that the check for $25,000 drawn by the Decimo Club and made payable to Herbert L. Barrett was intended by the Decimo Club, as Mr. Reading well knew and also intended, as a false pretense and misrepresentation and concealment of the fact that the payment was intended to be made and was made in truth to and for Mr. Reading and to or for no one else.

"The committee further finds that Mr. Reading so intended to conceal and did so conceal through such fictitious transactions the fact that he had entered into a corrupt employment by the Decimo Club.

"The committee further finds that Mr. Reading, while attorney-general and so representing himself, did in bad faith withhold from the deputy attorney-general of the State of New York the fact that he was intending to enter into the employ of the Decimo Club or was interested in its protection while he sought information from the deputy attorney-general with respect to his investigation of the Decimo Club and the intended or proposed restraining proceedings to be instituted by the State of New York.

"The committee finds in so dealing with the law officers of the State of New York Mr. Reading as attorney-general of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts acted in bad faith and with corrupt intent to deceive and mislead the law officials of the State of New York, and thereby brought reproach, discredit and distrust upon the law department of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in its relations with a like department of another state.

"The committee finds that the conduct of the affairs of the Decimo Club in the State of New York, as well as in this Commonwealth, was at the time of and prior to Mr. Reading's entering its employment, represented to him and appeared to be in fact, a more specious device conducted under false pretences and representation of fraternal benefits to its members, for the collection of money from members of the club for the enrichment of its officials, employes and promoters."

"The committee finds that Mr. Reading while Attorney-General did wilfully, wrongfully and corruptly receive and accept from the Decimo Club on or about June 8, 1927, the sum of $25,000 for his own use and profit in consideration of his promise and assurance of his official favor and protection to be extended by him as Attorney-General of Massachusetts to the Decimo Club in its conduct and operations in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

"SOLD OFFICIAL FAVOR."

"The committee finds that Mr. Reading after the payment to him of said $25,000 rendered no service to the Decimo Club either in extent or in value or in any wise commensurate with said payment for the revamping or revision or reconstruction of the constitution, bylaws or corporate structure of that club.

And the committee finds that said payment of $25,000 was made to Mr. Reading on the false pretense that it was for and in consideration of his legal services in a revision or revamping, amendment or reconstruction of the corporate structure of the Club and was a mere subterfuge and false pretense, as Mr. Reading well knew and as the officers of the Decimo Club participating in the said transaction and payment also well knew.

The committee further finds that Mr. Reading wilfully, wrongfully and corruptly received and accepted the said payment of $25,000 as and for and in the purchase of his official favor and of his protection to be officially extended to the said Decimo Club in its then present and to be continued operations in this Commonwealth."

WRONG DOING SPECIFIED

Reading was found guilty of misconduct and maladministration in the following points of the L. A. W. case:

In wrongfully entering into employment as private counsel for various subsidiaries of the United L. A. W. Corporation for his own private gain and in violation of his obligations and oath of office as attorney-general.

In calling in his capacity as attorney-general, after notice of alleged criminal acts, District Attorney Rugg by telephone.

In sending Inspector Mitchell to Worcester.

In procuring Mr. Wolfe's presence in the office of the attorney-general.

In the talk which took place at the interviews between the attorney-general and Wolfe on November 10 and on November 11;

In bringing about an audit of the books of the parent company by Mr. Pride;

In bringing about the turning over to an assistant attorney-general under an escrow agreement all the supervisory contracts and shares of stock in the subsidiaries owned by the parent company and Wolfe personally;

In sending Pride to Worcester with a letter to the banks on official stationery of the attorney-general and signed by him as attorney-general.

PROTECTING CRIMINAL ACTS.

In bringing about a settlement with assured immunity against criminal investigation or prosecution because of a controversy then pending and apparently involving criminal aspects between the parent company and its subsidiaries through fear on the part of Wolfe and his advisors that, if such settlement satisfactory to Mr Reading was not reached, criminal proceedings would result and through their desire to secure such indemnity; and in wilfully wrongfully and corruptly stifling and suppressing for his own profit and gain inquiry or investigation respecting alleged wrong-doings of the parent company or of Wolfe, and in wilfully, wrongfully and corruptly participating for his own gain and benefit in the compounding, composition and concealment of alleged unlawful or criminal acts committed within the Commonwealth and in wilfully, wrongfully and corruptly protecting from the operation of the laws of this Commonwealth alleged offenders against their provisions.

Hollywood's the Place to Get a Broken Heart

London, June 1—"I doubt if there is any place in the world where there are so many broken hearts as in Hollywood."

Thus spoke Mary Pickford, American movie star, as she passed through England en route to Paris, accompanied by her husband, Douglas Fairbanks.

Advising girls contemplating a movie career, Mary said:

"There are many obstacles in the path to film fame. It is a tremendous gamble.

"But, if a girl wants to try, there is a chance to make both name and fortune.

"The first requisite is sufficient money for snappy clothes. Then, if a girl has courage, looks, personality and talent, she has a chance of getting over—if she exercises patience and grit."

SPECIAL FAVOR TO NONE, SAYS FULLER IN VETO

In three veto messages sent to the House today, Governor Fuller condemned as "indefensible" the practice of the Legislature in awarding to relatives of deceased members and others the balance of salaries due.

One of the pieces of legislation returned was a general bill authorizing such payments. The other two were resolves affecting the balance of salaries of the late clerk of the House, James W. Kimball of Swampscott, and four deceased representatives—George P. Alger of Wellesley, Walter H. Snow of Somerville, Lewis R. Sullivan of Boston and Ezra W. Clark of Brockton.

"This practice of taking public money for private uses under the guise of charity has resulted in what is practically an indirect quasi-pension list and the great increase of these bills merits serious consideration on the part of the citizens and taxpayers," the Governor declared.

He showed that the practice, started in 1879, has grown to include not only legislators, but any servant of the state.

"No amount of precedent, however," the Governor added, "can excuse or legalize a wrong and an injustice to the general taxpayer."

His message on the general bill ended in these words:

"If government is not to become tyranny, the cardinal principle of good government must be observed—equal rights to all men; special privileges to none."

Only 17 P. C. of U. S. Teachers Are Men; 43 P. C. in 1880

Washington, June 1 (AP)—The Federal Bureau of Education announced today that of the million persons engaged in teaching in 1926, 17 per cent were men, an increase of 3 per cent over the number in 1920.

The bureau attributed a decrease in the number of male teachers between 1860 and 1920 to small salaries, better opportunities in other pursuits and to the entrance of a greater number of women into the profession.

According to the bureau, 43 per cent of the teachers in 1880 were male; 31.5 per cent in 1890; 30 per cent in 1900; 21 per cent in 1910, and 14 per cent in 1920.

EVACUATION OF PEKING BEGUN; BATTLE NEAR

Tokyo, June 1 (AP)—A dispatch to Rengo, official Japanese news agency, from Peking, says Marshal Chang Tso-Lin has informed the representatives of the powers that he is evacuating Peking shortly.

Peking, June 1 (AP)—At an impressive gathering in the presidential palace this afternoon Marshal Chang Tso-Lin addressed the diplomatic corps, intimating he was remaining in Penking pending a decisive battle at Liulho, 35 miles southwest.

Chang recounted his efforts to maintain peace and protect foreigners. He gave assurances he was arranging such protection and would continue to do so, regardless of his personal whereabouts.

The families of prominent Manchurian officials are beginning an exodus from Peking. Four special trains left for Mukden last night and another four today.

An official of the Japanese legation stated today that all the powers in Peking are co-operating for defense of the concessions.

There are approximately 12,000 foreign troops in Peking, Japan having 5000, the United States 3700, Great Britain 1500, France 1000 and Italy 380.

SPANISH FLIERS MAKE 3000 MILES IN ONE HOP

Karachi, India, June 1 (AP)—The Spanish airplane Jesus Del Gran Poder, attempting to break the distance flight record came down at Nasiriyah near Ur of the Chaldees.

Captains Ignacio Jiminez and Francisco Iglesias made a forced landing. Nasiriyah is 3000 miles from Seville, the starting point.

Seville, Spain dispatches last night credited the two fliers with having beaten the long-distance flight record set by Clarence Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine at 3911 miles on their flight to Germany. A radio message was received at Seville, saying the fliers had reached Nasirabad, British India, 4500 miles east of Seville and 500 miles beyond the fliers' goal, Karachi.

Coolidge Right There With Snappy Comeback

Washington, June 1 (INS)—Vice-President Dawes at last has been the butt of President Coolidge's repartee, according to a story circulated today.

The opportunity came to the President at his "farewell" breakfast to Republican congressional leaders.

Sen. Watson attended the breakfast attired in a Prince Albert coat but wearing a straw hat. The vice President told Watson a straw hat didn't go with a Prince Albert coat. Watson explained that he didn't relish wearing a high silk hat.

Dawes thought so well of his little joke that he repeated it at the table for the President's benefit.

"Mr. President," Dawes is quoted as saying, "Senator Watson came to your breakfast wearing a straw hat and a Prince Albert coat. I told him the straw hat wasn't proper and he should have worn a high silk hat."

Then, with a smile the President said: "Well, its just as proper to wear a straw hat with a Prince Albert coat as it is to smoke a pipe when you're wearing a Prince Albert."

Mothers Must Aid Safety Drive With Their Warnings--Goodwin

By FRANK A. GOODWIN

Highway Safety Editor Boston Evening American and Former Registrar of Motor Vehicles for Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

The one dominant thought running through the Mothers' Safety Don'ts Contest has been to impress upon the mothers of New England the necessity for doing their share to prevent needless slaughter on the highway.

We could not resist at various imes the need of calling attention o the fact that the great burden ir preventing accidents rested on he shoulders of the drivers of automobiles.

On numerous occasions we have ried to make the driver visualize he sorrow and suffering brought nto the homes of little victims and o the hearts of the mothers, but no words of ours could possibly have the effect of the letter from one of these mothers, Mrs. Mildred K. Look of 2 Raymond ave., West Somerville, Mass.

The letter speaks for itself. If every driver of an automobile in New England could be induced to read it, the death list for the coming year would be far less Here is the letter:

"I have no desire to enter the Safety Don't contest from a mercenary viewpoint, but if any word of mine can in any way reduce the toll of little lives, I shall be grateful.

"I am not sending 'Don'ts' to the children, though I think the idea is splendid and they need them. However, I wish to say to all drivers of motor vehicles:

"DON'T TAKE A CHANCE WHEN A LITTLE LIFE IS INVOLVED.

"Three years ago I used to kiss a beautiful blue-eyed boy and his little sister and send them off to school with the fonal 'Don't' which every thoughtful mother gives regarding automobiles.

"This morning I kissed the little sister and watched her go to school—ALONE—for the little blue-eyed boy is no longer here.

The grass grows green on his little grave in Maine where in August, 1925, he was the victim of a careless motorist.

"This man admitted that he could NOT SEE, but he was in SUCH A HURRY that he COULD NOT WAIT A MINUTE.

"HE TOOK A CHANCE on a federal road where there was no sidewalk, thinking he could dodge between another car and two people who were walking by the side of the road.

"He could not make it, and the two pedestrians—an elderly man and his nine-year old grandson, who was visiting him from Massachusetts—were simply plowed down. The grandfather lived, but the little boy never returned to his Massachusetts home.

"Oh, you drivers of cars. STOP a moment and consider! Is it not better to waste a few minutes of your time than to cause the misery that the driver of that car caused in our home?

"I am only ONE of COUNTLESS numbers of mothers who are experiencing this poignant sorrow.

"Remember when a little life is snuffed out some father's hair will turn gray with sorrow; some mother will weep, heart-brokenly, as she folds empty little garments to her breast; some little sister will start for school—ALONE.

"Can YOU afford to be careless?

"Do YOU want to face your Maker with the stain of a precious little life on your soul?

"OH, DRIVERS, DON'T TAKE A CHANCE."

This is a powerful letter, straight from the heart of a mother who knows, and it could be written by more than 200 mothers each year in the State of Massachusetts alone.

Almost every driver of an automobile has children of his own, or at least loves some other child and the whole psychology of safety is to make each driver have at all times within his mind:

HOW WOULD I FEEL IF I KILLED THE CHILD I LOVE?

Or how would I feel toward the driver of another automobile WHO WOULD KILL THAT CHILD?

ONE BIG THOUGHT

There is one big thought in Mrs. Look's letter—and it is outlined in this question that she asks:

"IS IT NOT BETTER TO WASTE A FEW MINUTES OF YOUR TIME THAN TO CAUSE THE MISERY WHICH THE DRIVER OF THAT CAR CAUSED IN OUR HOME?"

CURB FLOW OF RUM TO U. S.

Toronto, Ont., June 1 (AP)- Steps to curb the export of liquor into the United States by reducing the stocks stored along the border have been taken by the provincial government.

Owners of warehouses along the Ontario border between Sarnia and Windsor and in the Niagara Falls district have been warned that their operations are considered illegal and there must be no more heavy accumulations of stocks.

Provincial officers said Ontario was now the best province along the border for shipment into the United States. They asserted smugglers had little trouble running their liquor into the United States through Buffalo and Detroit.

FULLER CONGRATULATES SAFETY ESSAY WINNERS

Governor Fuller received and congratulated the six students of Boston schools who were winners in the "Safety Essay Contest" conducted by the Boston Automobile Club, the Chamber of Commerce and the school committee.

ALPINISTS DARE DEATH IN HUNT FOR NOBILE

(Copyright, 1928, by the Associated Press)

Kings Bay, June 1—While at least a half-dozen air expeditions were being organized in Europe today to search for the missing dirigible Italia, five men were slowly making their way by foot in an effort to reach the lonely region where the Italia is thought to have come down.

Paul Kremer, a Spitzbergen hunter, and four Italia alpinists were proceeding along Red bay in northern Spitzbergen, and along Liefde bay, near Amsterdam Island, and will try to go east over the glaciers to reach the most easterly winter house on Mosel bay.

If the Italia landed or crashed over land it is thought at Kings Bay that she will be found on Northeast Land, a large desolate island northeast of West Spitzbergen.

The sealer Hobby, which is expected at Spitzbergen on Sunday, will search for open water near the land on the north coast so that it can press forward toward the east and will also search for the Italia's crew in the winter houses on Northeast Land.

The Hobby, as soon as possible, will go north with the planes shipped aboard her and their Norwegian pilots, accompanied by the ice steamer Braganza, which is expected at Kings Bay tomorrow. The Citta di Milano, the Italia's base ship, also will go out again.

Ellsworth Offers to Aid Search for Italia

New York, June 1 (AP)—Lincoln Ellsworth, who flew over the North Pole with Roald Amundsen and Gen. Umberto Nobile in the dirigible Norge in 1926, today said he had cabled Roald Amundsen asking what he could do to aid in the search for the missing dirigible Italia.

He denied he planned to finance a search expedition as announced at Oslo by Lieut. Dietrichen, Norwegian flier.

Italian Plane to Join in Hunt for Nobile,

Rome, June 1 (AP)—The Italian hydro-airplane S55, completely equipped for an extensive trip, will leave Milan Monday for Spitzbergen to help in the search now going on for the missing dirigible Italia.

The plane will be piloted by Maj. Maddalena, with Lieut. Cagna auxiliary pilot. Two mechanics will be taken along. Maj. Maddalena is one of the best pilots in the Italian hydro-airplane force. He is now with an Italian squadron which is on a cruise in the western Mediterranean and will return to Italy on Sunday.

You May Say Brool or Broolay; Either Will Be Proper

Milwaukee, June 1 (AP)—The "Brool" river and "Brool, Wis.," will be names figuring prominently in the news with establishment of the summer White House on the Cedar Island estate of the late Henry Clay Pierce. While the name is Brule and is French, common usage has made "Brool" the correct pronunciation, Huron Smith, curator of the Milwaukee Museum, said.

Mr. Smith said it is not incorrect to use the French pronunciation, "Broolay."

CAT THAT BIT 2 GIRLS WAS MAD

The cat that clawed and bit two girls in Watertown Sunday was afflicted with rabies, the State Department of Animal Industry today informed Watertown police and Dr. E. T. McGlinchey, town inspector of animals.

Alice Pelletier of Parkvale rd., Allston, and Rose Dilliberto of Cottage st., Watertown, were bitten.

The Watertown police were advised to urge the Pasteur treatment for the girls and to make a search for cats that may have been bitten by the same animal.

The cat was shot by police called when the animal attacked the girls. Its brain was sent to Harvard for examination.

Work of Boys

Boston & Maine railroad detectives who investigated the attempt to wreck two trains at Revere on Wednesday night were satisfied that the attempt was the work of boys. In the gravel about there were found footmarks made by boys' shoes.

TESTS TO SHOW IF 'RADIUM BABY' IS DOOMED

New York, June 1 (INS)—A five-year-old boy, born of a mother who died from radium poisoning, will be the subject of scientific experiments to determinew hether such a child is doomed to the same death, it was learned today.

"'S'o"n'ny""" 'S'cott, playing today on a farm in Connecticut, is the child who will be examined by scientists and physicians to determine whether his mother, Mrs. Eleanor Scott, gave him death at the same time she gave him life by transmitting the radium poisoning that was in her bones.

Mrs. Scott died on December 21, 1927, from radium poisoning contracted during her work in the plant of the United States Radium Corporation, Orange, N. J.

An autopsy of Mrs. Scott's body showed that her bones contained radium which will remain in them for thousands of years, still emanating the rays that caused her death.

She died as Miss Eleanor Eckert, only a few of her close friends knowing that six years ago she was secretly married. Her husband disappeared two weeks after the marriage.

SKIPPER FINED $500 FOR POLLUTING WATERS

A $500 fine was imposed in federal court today in the first case to be heard here under the act of 1924 against pollution of navigable costal waters. Capt. Harry A. Smith of the oil tanker Swift Eagle pleaded guilty to allowing oil discharge through a leaky valve in the bilge discharge pipe aboard his ship while it was tied up at Fall River.

BULL MARKET IS AHEAD—DURANT

New York, June 1 (INS)—A real bull market is yet to come, said William C. Durant, former Bostonian, head of the motor car and banking enterprises bearing his name, on his return today from a European trip.

Durant has been a real leader in the ranks of the bulls for the last four years, and his profits on stock operations have been estimated at close to $100,000,000.

He was one of the first to foresee the sensational rise in General Motors, and it is believed he has sold little or none of the stock of that corporation acquired at much lower prices since 1924.

FIND TWO-FOOT HOLE IN S12

New London, Ct., June 1 (AP)—Examination in drydock today of the submarine S-12 revealed that she has a hole two feet in diameter caused when she was rammed by the submarine S-18 at the submarine base.

The hole is on the port side of the engine room. Lieut. Ralph F. Skylstead, aide to Read-Admiral F. H. Brumby, commander of the control force, said no water reached the interior of the S-12. The S-18 was undamaged.

It's Raining Cats at City Hall! Nice Day for It, at That!

Lightning struck City Hall yesterday and it rained cats up there today. Tomorrow, perhaps, the dogs will arrive.

In the lying-in ward at City Hall (which is the front steps at the School st. entrance) Mrs. Nancy Hanks, Boston's first lady of catdom, became a mother to five kittens today, and promptly abandoned them.

Hugh McLaughlin, veteran janitor, came upon them soon afterwards and went in quest of milk. Then he called the Animal Rescue League, which took them away.

Nancy later returned, filled with remorse, and sobbed her heart out. She promised to be good to the kits if they were brought back, but no go.

WARDS OF THE STATE TO SEE "CIRCUS ROOKIES"

Patients of three State institutions will see the moving picture, "Circus Rookies," next week under the auspices of the Boston Evening American and Loew's State Theatre, where the comedy will be the feature of the program all week. Karl Dane and George Arthur will furnish the comedy. The picture will be shown at the Wrentham State School on Monday, the Boston Sanitarium Tuesday and the Medfield State School Wednesday.

REED AND HULL TO BLOCK SMITH

New York, June 1 (INS)—Gov. Smith of New York came out of West Virginia in a strategic position by virtue of his victory over Senator James A. Reed of Missouri by between 8000 and 10,000 votes for the Democratic preference.

The result has led to a revival of talk for nomination of Smith by acclamation, but Reed announced he would fight this move vigorously. He has selected the man to place him in nomination at Houston.

Rep. Cordell Hull of Tennessee may be a rallying point against Smith among Southern delegations. He was put forward by Senator Simmons of North Carolina, and a bitter Smith foe. With his own state, a majority of North Carolina, and other Southern votes Hull may have more delegates than Reed. Besides he is a dry and would furnish a convenient man for the militant Prohibitionists to support.

STATE HOUSE RUM REPORT DUE MONDAY

POWER LOBBY PAYS COLLEGE PROFESSORS

the data Wolfe collected while under pay by the power interests.

Another phase of Wolfe's research, which has extended over nearly three years, was an investigation of all the civics and economics text books used in Colorado high schools to find out what was "objectionable" to the power interests.

The third was a study of wage payments, intended to show "the part the utilities play in the prosperity of Colorado."

The propaganda committee paid $250 a month and expenses to W. C. Duvall of the Colorado University engineering school to make a "survey of municipally owned electric light and power plants in Colorado." Utility hostility to municipal ownership and a scramble to buy up the plants now so owned bristle upon page upon page of the commission's record.

CHECKS PUT IN RECORD.

Lewis said the survey was made "so we could determine for our own satisfaction" just how much money the municipal plants were losing, or whether any were succeeding.

Checks put into the record and Lewis' testimony indicated a total of $1192.68 paid to Duvall. Wolfe was paid $100 a month to eke out a like salary from the university. When he complained that this was inadequate the propaganda bureau tacked on $25 a month, according to Lewis.

W. Lewis Abbott of Colorado College was paid his expenses for attending power meetings, and D. C. Sowers, director of the Bureau of Research of Colorado University, for judging papers on utility subjects in a contest.

Professor Jacob Swart of Colorado College, also was paid expenses for attending a meeting of the power interests' educational committee, according to Lewis, and Professor H. D. Jordan for judging papers in another contest.

Lewis wrote John C. Parker of Brooklyn, N. Y., chairman of the committee on co-operation with educational institutions of the National Electric Light Association, on February 25, 1928:

"In launching our program we decided that the best results could be achieved through the establishment of a fellowship. This medium, it was thought, offered a broad avenue for employing the facilities of a university, with all the dignity and prestige that such an institution enjoys.

LESSONS ON ECONOMICS.

"All negotiations were conducted through this committee, which enjoys a splendid contact with, and the confidence of, all the institutions of higher education embraced in our territory—Colorado, New Mexico and Wyoming.

"We left the selection of a suitable fellow to the university authorities, who, after a thorough survey, recommended Hubert P. Wolfe, a graduate of Northwestern University."

Northwestern is paid $30,000 a year by the National Electric Light Association for utility research.

"This committee, of course, closely scrutinized his credentials and intellectual leanings.

"In fitting Mr. Wolfe for his work we held frequent round-table talks, had him attend our weekly luncheon meetings and arranged for him to attend our recent annual state convention.

"At present Mr. Wolfe is devoting part of his time to making a survey of all text books used in the high schools of Colorado, to determine what inaccuracies exist with reference to public utility subjects.

"In this work he has succeeded in obtaining the assistance of the university librarian.

"Mr. Wolfe also is assisting in the compilation of a series of more than 100 lessons comprising a correspondence course in public utility economics, recently launched by the University of Colorado through the efforts of this committee.

"We now have 24 public utility company executives as members of the university faculty, and Mr. Wolfe is collaborating with each in the preparation of the nine major subjects covered.

"The fellowship will serve to lift the utility industry and its business to a higher ethical plane by reason of the attention directed to it by an institution of such high standing.

"We gave you an idea of the manner in which we are pursuing our lectures or classes which are being given in every university and college in Colorado."

How Power Lobby Handled One Paper

BERNARD J MULLANEY.
DIRECTOR ILLINOIS COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC UTILITY

SOUTH MICHIGAN AVE CHICAGO ILL.

SWING JOHNSON BILL FOR BOULDER DAM NOW IN HOUSE RULES COMMITTEE STOP SERIOUSLY OBJECTIONABLE IN PRESENT FORM BECAUSE IT MAKES POSSIBLE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT INVESTMENT IN CONSTRUCTION AND OPERATION OF EXTREMELY LARGE ELECTRICAL GENERATING EQUIPMENT MEANING GOVERNMENT IN POWER BUSINESS ON ENORMOUS SCALE STOP THIS WOULD ESTABLISH DANGEROUS PRECEDENT FOR FUTURE GOVERNMENT POWER OPERATION AFFECTING ENTIRE INDUSTRY STOP BILL WILL PROBABLY LEAVE. RULES COMMITTEE AND BE IN HOUSE WITHIN TEN DAYS STOP EXTREMELY IMPORTANT THESE FACTS BE UNDERSTOOD BY PUBLIC AND IMPORTANT MEN YOUR LOCAL TERRITORY STOP QUICK ACTION NEEDED STOP WILL START FURTHER INFORMATION TO YOU AT ONCE.

GEORGE OXLEY.

INTERESTING sidelights on the inside workings of the power lobby in disseminating propaganda inimicable to Boulder Dam is disclosed in a series of written and telegraphic communications concerning the Chicago Tribune and Harper Leech, a feature writer on that newspaper.

The above facsimile reproduces the telegram that started the Illinois propaganda machine to working. On January 7, 1927, a rush wire was sent out by George F. Oxley, publicity director of the National Electric Light Association in New York, directed to the local public utility press agents through the country. Among them was B. J. Mullaney of Chicago, chairman of the Illinois Committee on Public Utility Information and the right-hand man of Samuel Insull. The telegram, now part of the Federal Trade Commission's records, reads:

"Jan. 7, New York
"Bernard J. Mullaney,
"Director Illinois Committee,
"Public Utility Information,
"Care Peoples Gas Light and Coke Co.,
"122 South Michigan Ave.,
"Chicago, Illinois

"Swing Johnson bill for Boulder Dam now in House Rules Committee. Seriously objectionable in present form because it makes possible Federal Government investment in construction and operation of extremely large electrical generating equipment, meaning Government in power business on enormous scale. This would establish dangerous precedent for future Government power operation affecting entire industry. Bill will probably leave Rules Committee and be in House within ten days. Extremely important these facts be understood by public and important men in your local territory. Quick action needed. Will start further information to you at once.

"GEORGE OXLEY."

How quickly this desperate cry for help brought a response from Mullaney and the latter's subsequent success in handling the situation through Leech and the Chicago Tribune will be disclosed in these columns tomorrow.

Crusade of Hearst Papers Praised by Congressmen

Washington, June 1. Activities of the Hearst newspapers in exposing the machinations of the "power trust" were described as the "greatest public service by a private agency in a generation," by Rep. F. H. LaGuardia (R) of New York, in a statement.

Other members of Congress were equally high in their praise of the "courageous crusade" by the Hearst newspapers.

Revelations of the Federal Trade Commission in its investigation of the power interests have forced the "power trust" as a major issue in the impending national elections, according to Congressmen interviewed.

The power lobby has adopted a short-sighted policy in attempting to influence the people against their own interests, they said. The railroads in their palmiest days of control in legislatures, utility commissions and other public agencies, were not as brazen as the hydro-electric power interests, were other observations, it was declared.

Action of the House in passing the Swing-Johnson Boulder Dam bill over the protest of the power lobby, was said to be but the beginning of a public reaction that will go to extremes, unless the power interests reform, LaGuardia said.

"The Hearst papers have rendered the greatest public service of any private agency in a generation. While some of us in Congress have known for years what the power interests were doing, we never had a vehicle to lay the facts before the people.

"The Hearst papers have been courageous in exposing the machinations of the power interests, their propaganda lobby that has reached into the schools. The power trust has been condemned by its own documents before the Federal Trade Commission.

START SABATINI STORY MONDAY

"The Wolf-Man of Paris," a thrilling new romance by Rafael Sabatini, author of "Scaramouche," "Sea Hawk," and "Captain Blood," begins next Monday in the Boston Evening American.

This is a story of flight from the Red Terror, of love in the shadow of the guillotine. You will meet Chauvinière, half gentleman and half wolf. Also that lovely lady, Cleonie De Montsorbier, and that gallant gentleman Corbal. Once again the modern Dumas takes the turbulent period of the French Revolution as the background for "The Wolf-Man of Paris."

"—Citizen Chauvinière entered the prison to hear the list of the condemned read to the waiting nobles. Cleonie De Montsorbier felt herself scorched under the burning intensity of his eyes. Then came an order striking her name from the list of those sentenced to the guillotine. The young noblewoman's fate lay in the hands of the arrogant young upstart who dared——"

But read the story from start to finish. It begins next Monday in the Boston Evening American. Do not miss Sabatini's "The Wolf-Man of Paris."

CITE 'DEFIANCE' OF STEWART

Washington, June 1 (AP)—Routine testimony, to prove that Robert W. Stewart refused to answer questions asked by the Senate Teapot Dome committee opened the Government's drive today to convict the wealthy Indiana Standard Oil official of a misdemeanor for his refusal.

Stenographers who took Stewart's testimony before the Senate committee on February 2 and 3 testified Stewart had been asked whether he had any knowledge of anyone who received Liberty bond oil profits of the Continental Trading Company and refused to answer on the grounds he did not believe the question was pertinent.

He also declined to answer because he had been summoned as a witness in the then pending trial of Harry F. Sinclair, charged with conspiring with Albert B. Fall to defraud the Government in the Teapot Dome case.

Stewart, according to the testimony, also declined to say whether he discussed the bond transactions with Sinclair.

Today in the real estate columns of the Classified Ads, you will find scores of opportunities for profitable investment.

ARMED MEN GUARD 24 GYPSIES IN COURT

A Story of Gay Life and a Battle of Hearts

CHAPTER 28.

THE taxicab driver's ears were [illegible] and his nose was cold, and his hands were very cold and stiff [illegible] he wished that the lady would [illegible]. He wished to cripes she would.

The fare, a young and raccoon [illegible] one, slumped in a corner of the cab with his collar high and his hat brim low and his feet on the [illegible] spring seat.

He smoked incessant cigarettes. At intervals of a minute or two he consulted his wrist watch, and [illegible] did his eyes repeatedly lift to the building before which the cab was parked. This was a [illegible] story building fronted with [illegible] sheets of leaded [illegible], a studio apartment [illegible].

He glared at it. He thought, "Oh come on, sugar. Tell him you've got to catch a train. Tell him anything." And, "Hang it all, what's keeping her? Six twenty-five. She told me six." And, "Brrr, it's cold! Why didn't I bring that pint along?"

He slit the frosted front pane open an inch or so and said on a [illegible] breath to the taxicab driver, "Blow your horn."

The taxicab driver obeyed with considerable gusto.

The lady behind the fifth floor studio windows heard the horn. She thought, "I suppose that's Jerry." But she did not speak nor stir. Not the least bit.

Dolly was perched atop a tall stool on a model stand, wearing a Spanish shawl and a rose in her hair. And a [illegible] young man stood before an easel with a palette on his [illegible] and a brush in his hand, [illegible].

The [illegible] young man was thirty [illegible] and one inch over six feet tall [illegible] once a week someone asked him why he [illegible] himself as [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] and to look at the young man was [illegible].

He wore a [illegible] silk shirt open at [illegible] [illegible] the buttons missing and the sleeves rolled up, and the pockets [illegible] with his [illegible].

He painted one of the [illegible] of the models [illegible] and as he painted he had [illegible] thoughts. He thought that [illegible] the picture was [illegible] [illegible].

He thought that she was very [illegible] [illegible] "Thanks, dear [illegible]."

In the [illegible] of [illegible] December, Dolly Quinn had made [illegible] twelve dollars.

This was [illegible]. This was so [illegible] as to be almost unbelievable. In the [illegible] elevator, [illegible] the black [illegible] she slipped her gloved hand to her sleeved left arm and gravely and secretly pinched herself.

And the [illegible] thing about it was that at one [illegible] she had never before [illegible] [illegible] her reputation spread, [illegible] was [illegible] and more [illegible] Quinn.

At [illegible] it had been so easy [illegible] [illegible].

So she [illegible] the rounds. She had [illegible] the studios of dozens of other artists [illegible] and [illegible] leaving her name and telephone number and the memory of her [illegible] behind her. She had [illegible] [illegible] and secured appointments and reappointments.

Her days were now quite crowded with appointments, and with rides all over the city to keep them. Ten o'clock of a morning might find her somewhere in the [illegible] being camera shot for a soap or shoe or candy or other ad. [illegible] thirty might see her thirty [illegible] away sitting for an illustrator.

At two she might pose in a loft in the Village, at four in a large [illegible] to [illegible] the Hotel des Artistes. Life for her had become an alternation of extremest opposites, a [illegible], a climbing in and out of taxicabs, a running up and down stairs—and in between a [illegible] sitting still.

Nor were her evenings as they had been.

On the Saturday night of the week before she went to Atlantic City she concluded her last play [illegible] to [illegible] seats in the pit of the theater. [illegible] more than forty weeks [illegible] she had earned and saved well over 200 dollars. [illegible] now [illegible] and attend evening classes in art uninterruptedly for some time to come. MANY COMPLAIN ABOUT MOULDS ON FOODS

Dr. P. H. Mullowney

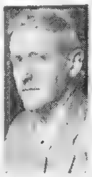
Director of Hearst Health Laboratory

Many complaints are being received from housekeepers that foodstuffs in ice chests and pantries are being attacked by mouldy growths.

There is a particular reason why such a condition should be present in such an unusually large number of cases. It is due to the almost uninterrupted series of damp, rainy days [illegible] [illegible] for the past [illegible] weeks [illegible] [illegible] shows.

Unless we get a number of days with dry, cloudless weather the presence of mould will continue to be a serious factor.

If it were not for the fact that the days have been rather cool [illegible] the damage from mould to foodstuffs would have been very much greater.



Dr Mullowney

The spores of yeasts and moulds are ever present in the air, and it requires only a fairly damp, warm spell to develop these invisible vegetable growths into a real food menace.

The sight of mouldy growth is a familiar one to all with its characteristic orange red, green, black and white colors.

It may be that some, if not all of the varieties of mould could be consumed in moderation without causing sickness but scarcely anyone has the hardihood to risk the test.

COMMON MOULDS

For example, it is quite common in many high class hotels and restaurants to purposely "ripen" beef by allowing it to accumulate a heavy mould. This is, of course, properly trimmed when the beef has aged sufficiently for use. Such a system would hardly recommend itself to the average careful housekeeper.

Some meats, such as chicken,

Radio Dialog

WEEI tonight takes on "The Cabin Door," a New York program featuring Phil Cook, the Mitchell Brothers and others. The feature is made available to the audience of the local station through a shift from Thursday to Friday night. It is planned to carry "The Cabin Door" through the summer at least.

You Must Hear This One

SOMETIMES a long wait and much patience bring their reward. The Cities Service Cavaliers close their program tonight with Wagner's exquisite song, "Dreams." This one number is sufficient to glorify the entire long program of the group. It is said that the song was written as a study by Wagner, preliminary to the composition of "Tristan und Isolde," and it is true that the melody has much of the atmosphere of the great Love-Death drama.

Balanced Program

THE MUTUAL Savings Banks believe in pleasing everybody, so they have rather apologetically inserted Anitra's Dance of Grieg as a so-called classical "balance" in a program largely devoted to such chef's-d'oeuvre as "I Just Roll Along, Having My Ups and Downs." You can hear it all while the pork chops are frying at 6 o'clock.

Requested

PALMOLIVE'S program builders embark tonight in a series of broadcasts which they claim are arranged according to overwhelming requests on the part of the audience. It sounds very nice and impressive, but if the musical director actually permitted his program to be made up by popular selections, he would have by a 90 per cent vote, something like the following: "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi," "Get Out and Get Under the Moon," "Pasta e Fagioli," "My Own Home," "Constantinople," "The Wreck of the [illegible]" or [illegible] "Waters of the Minnetonka," "My Own Home," "Memories," "O, [illegible] My Delight," "Laugh Clown, [illegible]" and "My Own Home," "Wabash [illegible]," "My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice," and "My Own Home." Tonight's Palmolive "request" program, however, contains nary a one of the above [illegible] American selections.

MR. BOSTON

By Jack Conway

MR. BOSTON took command of a typewriter as soon as he reached the Sporting Department today.

"I want to get my ticket applications in early," piped the veteran.

"What ticket applications?" demanded the sporting department gang which wanted to get in on the good thing.

"Football tickets."

"What, in June?"

"But it will soon be October and then you birds will be doing a merry-go-round trying to get a line on somebody who is 'in.'

"Read Ted Lynch's story about the Harvard corporation declining against the larger Stadium project. This means that only a mere handful (55,000) or so will be able to witness the Harvard-West Point and Harvard-Michigan games here next fall.

"For a time I thought it was a lead pipe cinch that Harvard would have a new Stadium capable of seating from 80,000 to 100,000. Under such conditions the ticket jam would not have been as tremendous as it is now. The big games would have sold out and all of that, but one wouldn't have to be a member of the Harvard trustees to get a couple of pasteboards.

"I believe that the real reason why the Harvard corporation slipped a kayo to the idea about a new Stadium was to prove that colleges are still being run for purposes of higher education and not for football.

"Even if it were necessary to restrict the ticket applications to the big games to the student body and members of their families I imagine that no great harm would be done to civilization.

"I REALIZE, of course, that the Old Grad likes to get back into the campus atmosphere and bring a flock of boy friends along with him for the purpose of making merry and proving that the eighteenth amendment isn't all that it is supposed to be.

"If college football is to be just a free-for-all good time for everybody, with a little football tossed in for a side order, I'm in favor of staging the big clashes somewhere beyond the three mile limit where all restrictions can be tossed off.

"A fellow like Tex Rickard, if he had the Harvard football rights, would put up a Stadium capable of seating 1,000,000 persons. He is wise enough to know that he would get his money back, along with a fine profit, in five years. I also believe that the dear old grads would pay whatever price Tex asked for tickets.

"Rickard has always felt that if one has the right attraction, and a Harvard-Yale game would fill the bill, the price of tickets is secondary. The whole wide world wants to be there when the big thing happens. It is immaterial that you may not know the difference between a forward pass and a fumbled punt. You like to say you were there, especially when Mr. Whosit Banker and Mrs. Social Climber were right down there on the 40-yard line.

"THE Harvard corporation seems to have decided that colleges are still conducted for educational purposes. The fact that the proposed new Stadium would be a sure thing didn't seem to interest it at all. Apparently the Harvard corporation isn't the least bit commercialized as far as sport is concerned.

"It is a great thing, of course, to play on the Harvard varsity before a crowd of 55,000. I have often thought, though, that the youngsters who make the football team would in many cases do much better in after life if their heads were not turned by too much ballyhoo at college.

"Of course you can tell me of cases of former college football men who have become big figures in business and who credit success to football. The training the sport gave them helped make real men of them, but I can point to others who benefited physically from football, but who got the wrong outlook on life from the football ballyhoo and who didn't carry on so well later on.

"Don't weep too much because only 55,000 persons will see the big games at the Stadium next fall. I often wondered how that many people were able to get away from work for an afternoon anyway. Maybe people don't work nowadays."

Tunney Tells His Training Methods

By GENE TUNNEY

Heavyweight Champion of the World

(Copyright, 1928, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

SPECULATOR, N. Y., June 1—Food and rest are two important essentials in training for a boxing bout.

Plain food, simply cooked, with plenty of vegetables, are the requisites of my own regime.

Two meals a day comprise my diet during the training period for a fight. And this schedule is not undergoing any change for the match with the British heavyweight, Tom Heeney, next month in New York.

In fact, it has not been varied since my early days of professional boxing and remained the same during the period of winning and holding the heavyweight championship.

HOWEVER, if I followed all the friendly advice received from experts and amateurs, my diet would indeed be scrambled.

I am even warned in these well-meaning epistles that arrive daily in the mail that my overseas rival "has been raised on good old English roast beef, which makes him a brawny and dangerous opponent."

Breakfast, of which I partake after my early morning 10-mile jaunt on the road, consists of stewed prunes, oatmeal, two soft boiled eggs, a dish of sliced bacon, toasted whole wheat bread and coffee. That is the only cup of coffee for the day.

My second meal comes at six in the evening. It consists of a light soup, a steak or young broiled chicken, fish, onions in season, celery, hearts of lettuce, baked potato, whole wheat bread, carrots, fresh creamed spinach or asparagus, prunes or fresh strawberries and a glass of milk.

BETWEEN meals I drink two quarts of water. I like plenty of water always. Pies are taboo, but frequently I eat a slice of the chef's homemade cake, and often indulge in ice cream, of which I am very fond.

IN the evening a stroll to the neighboring drug-store is a popular form of relaxation. There is usually a group of townfolk gathered to pass a word of greeting, and discuss the happenings in the village. There is mail to be answered of course and that obligation is usually disposed of after the morning meal.

At 9 p. m. I am in bed ready to enjoy a rest of at least nine hours. The windows of my room are thrown wide open and no matter how warm the day in this mountain resort, a light blanket is needed at night to ward off the cool breeze that springs up after sunset.

AS for proper rest, I never have difficulty in obtaining it. Once I am in bed, my sleep is sound. Nothing seems to disturb my slumber which is a never-failing source of wonder to the camp retinue.

Plans for Stadium on Charles River

By MYLES T. McSWEENEY

I SAT in a lunch room in Harvard sq., just like a lot of the boys do, so that passing debs in sport cars would think I was a Harvard student when I came out.

I was munching away at some "boodered toast and cups coffee" in a window chair, to be conspicuous, when two young men who didn't look like students sat down on [illegible] chairs.

It was impossible for me [illegible] to hear the [illegible]. It was about the refusal of the Harvard Corporation to approve the plans to enlarge the present stadium. I set down what I heard, because I [illegible] it offers a solution to the whole stadium problem.

"I SAY Wilmont, did you see the story in the Boston Evening American that the Harvard Corporation has refused to approve the plans for a bigger stadium or for the erection of a new one?"

"Yes, M[illegible] I did. Funny how that paper always gets the big news first. Even if the corporation did vote to erect a new stadium where would they put it?"

"Well, I wonder what['ll] be done about it. Here am I left in a most embarrassing position. I promised several of the [illegible] tickets for next season's big game, and now, I understand that even if the old wooden stands are replaced by ones of concrete, the seating capacity will not be increased one jot or tittle."

"It seems that something ought to be done about it. Surely we cannot forever be inferior in our athletic facilities to that little college down in New Haven that has a bowl seating 80,000."

"I WONDER, Wilmont, if the corporation would consider suggestions?"

"I can see no valid reason why [illegible] sensible suggestion [illegible] be given consideration, M[illegible]. What may I ask do you propose?"

"Why couldn't a [illegible] stadium be built on Soldiers' Field?"

"That has [illegible] of probably not, but I think that it is [illegible] at this time. It seems to me that there is a strong feeling against [illegible] the Soldiers' Field site."

"W[illegible] the [illegible] back of the [illegible]"

"[illegible] opposed to [illegible]. That is out of the question."

"Well, there is that huge field across from Soldiers' Field. Why could not a huge bowl be erected there?"

That and, I believe, is a part of the Metropolitan park system. Besides, the place at present is used by the Metropolitan Driving Club

C. C. Pyle Says He Will Pay Off Runners Tonight

New York, June 1 (AP)—C. C. Pyle reiterates that Andrew Payne of Claremore, Okla., who finished first and the other nine money winners in the Los Angeles to New York jaunt will receive their share of the $48,500 prize money at 8 o'clock tonight.

The reiteration was made necessary when the prize money which Pyle had promised would be in Tex Rickard's hands yesterday afternoon failed to materialize.

MILLWOOD HUNT CLUB SHOW OPENS TODAY

The finest horses in the state will take part in the two-day meet of the Millwood Hunt Club show which opens at Framingham this afternoon. The affair is next to the final event of any consequence of show [illegible] events and finds the many entries at their best.

The entry list this year is not as long as past meets but the quality of the various types of horses to be shown has improved. The number of classes and events are larger this year and will no doubt keep the three judges as well as spectators busy.

Henry V. Colt of Geneseo, N. Y.; Elliott S. Nichols of Detroit, and Allen S. Blodgett of New York will serve as judges. The list of trophies offered this year is also far superior to that of any other meeting.

The most important of these are the Millwood Hunt Cup and the Waveney Farm Cup, both for the teams of three hunters. The Millwood Cup will be contested for this afternoon while the Waveney trophy will come up for competition tomorrow.

Of the two, the Waveney trophy is the most important since two legs have been won by the hunters from the Myopia and Norfolk clubs. Last year Harry Good of Winchester, who had [illegible] a flock of jumpers and a [illegible] won [illegible] his first leg on the [illegible] prize.

Mr. Good is back again this year with a fine list of horses hoping to annex his second leg on the prize. Though the Norfolk Club has lost the Cushman string, club members hope to make the much discussed [illegible] the Liggett stable of blue ribbon winners have joined their ranks.

Bob Quinn Considers Remodeling of Fenway Park'

WILL FIRST BUILD UP TEAM

Blue Prints Would Have Playing Field Shifted, Also Double Decker Stands

The Boston Red Sox are speeding West, to open their first invasion of the year in Cleveland tomorrow. Meanwhile, their two cripples, Ken Williams and Walter Gerber, are recovering from bruises and bumps.

The pair, according to Bill Carrigan, just before he left will be back in the game by Monday. It was feared that the holiday [illegible] had broken [illegible] examination proved [illegible]

Bob Quinn [illegible] being wasted [illegible]

The huge holiday crowd has given the Sox president much to think about. He was looking over the blue prints of new Fenway layout, while the showers were killing the Thursday game. These plans, which were drawn up some time ago by the same architects who handled the Yankee Stadium and Forbes Field in Pittsburgh, call for a double-decked stand all around the ball yard.

The playing field would be shifted, with the home plate back where the left field corner is now, a short right field, 316 feet, and a longer left field, 345 feet. The stands, as drawn up, would seat [illegible] fans, with no open faced bleachers whatsoever.

President Quinn claims he isn't getting ready to put up a new ball park, but he is preparing in case he gets a good ball club. And he thinks Bill Carrigan is getting one, slowly but surely.

"I had these plans drawn some time ago," explains the prexy. "I knew that the Fenway wouldn't be big enough if our ball club ever got going. But before doing anything I made up my mind to get me a ball club. By that I mean a good first division club. When I have that I may think of a new layout.

"Four or five more regulars would just about set Carrigan, and if four of the best scouts in the game, and money can find such miracles, we'll have them. Rebuilding the Fenway would cost at least a million dollars and we must have a first class ball club before starting to work there."

Part of a club owner's dream just now, but dreams come true in baseball with remarkable speed, sometimes.

Schoolboy Chatter

Newton high receives Rindge Tech this afternoon at the Garden City field. Bill Dyer, star hurler for the Cambridge team, will probably get the mound assignment. Don Wilson, manager and star hurler of the league leaders, may face the visiting nine.

Newton now has seven wins to its credit in the Suburban League, and only requires two more victories to cinch the title.

Medford goes to Brockton today to face the Shoe City nine. The team played fine ball the other day while beating Cambridge Latin, with Spaulding showing to advantage on the mound. That hurler was inexperienced at the start of the year but has developed into one of the best of the school speed-ball moundsmen. His work has been due in large part to the fine handling in the games given him by little Eddie McCarthy, classy backstop for the Blue and White.

Somerville plays at Cambridge Latin tomorrow afternoon in an important Suburban League contest. Al Blanche will be the mound choice of Charlie Dickerman, with Johnny Murphy in the outfield ready to help out on the hillock if necessary. McFadgen will toss for the home team. The Red and Blue is due to jump into the win column and may be able to defeat its host.

DUTTON TO DEFEND TITLE

Championship Will Be Decided Over 36-Hole Route Again This Year

By BILL GRIMES

The seventh annual tournament of the New England Senior Golfers' Association will be staged on Tuesday and Wednesday of next week at the Woodland Golf Club.

This organization is growing in leaps and bounds and this year's turnout will exceed, both in number and ability, all of the previous championships.

Although at the last meeting of the New England Senior Golfers' Association a rule was adopted which created a new class known as Associate Members, the waiting list continues to grow and it is now one of the most flourishing golf organizations in this country.

As has been the rule in the past, the New England senior championship will be decided over the 36-hole route, and the winner will be awarded a trophy along with his title, while the runner-up will receive a trophy.

There will also be a trophy donated to the best gross score for 36 holes turned in by a member of Class A (70 years and over).

George C. Dutton of the Woodland Golf Club is the present New England senior champion. The Woodlander put together a pair of 80's last year and wound up with a three-stroke lead over his clubmate, W. M. Noble.

George Dutton is again ready and anxious to defend his title.

The Framingham Country Club had things all their own way as far as gross trophies in Class A were concerned last season. M. P. [illegible] turned two rounds of 34 and finished with a five-stroke lead over F. P. Lee.

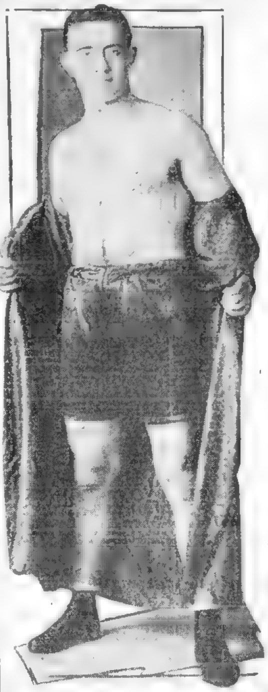
On the opening day last year, George Wright tied with D. T. Kidder of Brae Burn for the low net prize offered for Class A players. George Wright, who is now 81 years of age, had a 102 and his 25 handicap gave him a net 77, while Kidder was 97-20-77.

The Class A net winners of the second day of the 1927 tournament were Morton Alden of Wollaston and John Shepard, Jr. of Brae Burn, the former having a one-stroke edge at the conclusion of their rounds.

Harry Richmond of Woodland clicked off an 87 to win the first day gross of Class B and the following afternoon, C. S. Stroud, the Biddeford Me. veteran, scored an even 90.

The net prizes of this division were won by H. Thornton of Brae Burn, S. J. Francis of Woodland, and F. P. McCormick, from Segregansett the opening day and by W. T. (Daddy) Gill, Waltham, A. H. Porter, Belmont Spring and Julius Matthews, Woodland, on the closing day.

BRING 'EM ALL ON



Jimmy Maloney, South Boston's heavyweight who battles Jack DeMave next Monday night at the Wigwam, is in the best shape of his career. The Peninsula battler has trained hard for this contest and hopes to knock out DeMave. A K. O. would put Jim back in the running with the flock of heavyweights now seeking Tunney's crown. Incidentally Shamus will give Hub ring fans a real treat by opening fire on DeMave from the bell in the first round.

Plans for Stadium on Charles River

I'm afraid we could not consider that site."

"NOW there remains a large tract of land over what in back of Soldiers' Field. I have seen large crowds there for Saturday. It appears it is a [illegible] of some kind.

"O, [illegible] where the Gaels' football teams play. I fear there would be some [illegible] in considering these Gaels to give up that particular spot."

"Could they not listen to reason? Suppose I told them that we really had to have a bigger stadium. I could tell them that I preferred the grounds. Surely they would be reasonable."

WILMONT held a piece of toast in mid-air. He was thinking.

"Milton, don't argue with the Gaels. I can tell you from experience that it would be [illegible]. See that bump over my eye? Well, one time, I wore a yellow tie. I did not know it was St. Patrick's Day. If you asked the [illegible] ball teams to get off the field to make place for a new stadium, they might get mad."

Milton was visibly depressed by this information. For five minutes he neither moved nor spoke. [illegible] when Milton [illegible] and [illegible] looked."

"Wonderful!" cried Wilmont. "[illegible] fellow, [illegible] that [illegible] then you can have the [illegible] for the games."

"Sure," said Milton with the enthusiasm of genius, "they could build the new stadium on [illegible] the Charles river. It would [illegible] people. Then we could [illegible] tickets."

Wilmont [illegible] the plan. "How about the field? Where would the playing surface be?"

"That's easy. We could cover the water with tar paper, and [illegible] the playing surface. Don't you see?"

"Why yes. Let's hurry over to see [illegible] at Lowell."

Party Sandwiches Tips by Martha Lee

Martha Lee

GOOD bread is, of course, the cornerstone of attractive sandwiches. It should be light yet not crumbly, moist yet firm. It is best a day old and bread with a thick foundation is best of all.

If you wish to slice your bread very thin, first butter it before cutting, crosswise of the loaf. If however, you want a he-man sandwich, it is more efficient to cut the loaf the long way.

As in all cooking the materials should be assembled before the actual making begins. You will need a sharp, flexible knife, a bread board, butter which has been thoroughly creamed or a [illegible] and a thin, broad spatula. For party sandwiches you will need fancy cutters and a variety of [illegible].

A damp towel is a requisite of sandwiches that are to be kept, and for picnics, large flat boxes or pans lined with waxed paper for packing the sandwiches. If these are carefully packed and covered tightly with the moist cloth, they can be made the day before they are to be used. The slices, however, must be very well buttered to prevent the filling from soaking into the bread, and the sandwiches must be covered tightly so that there will be no air on slices to dry them.

[illegible] combined with hard boiled eggs, mild cheese and chopped pecans, all blended together with mayonnaise, makes a delicious filling. The proportions are three [illegible] to two hard cooked eggs and ½ pound of mild grated cheese and 1½ cups pecans.

[illegible] mixed with chopped olives and mild butter is delicious, too. Another nice combination is equal parts of orange marmalade or [illegible] jelly and cream cheese. The cheese is spread on one slice of bread, the jelly on the other and then the two combined.

For something different and delicious try one cup of celery chopped [illegible] two [illegible] of chopped nuts [illegible] with, of course, enough mayonnaise to com[illegible].

Another good combination is ½ cup of [illegible] mixed with half [illegible] mayonnaise to [illegible] celery.

Brown bread spread with whipped cream and sprinkled with grated parmesan cheese and then covered with a thick layer of radish slices is another different combination, while still another is cream cheese softened with cream or mayonnaise and combined with chopped salted almonds.

Apples, raisins and lemon juice are excellent as a filling for graham bread sandwiches. While for a sweet sandwich you can't improve on preserved pineapple and chopped dates spread between buttered nut bread.

Chipped beef spread sparingly on buttered bread and then covered with a thin layer of mayonnaise is excellent and, of course, we are all familiar with chicken, shrimp, lobster, salmon, tuna or boiled ham mixed with creamed butter and seasoned to taste with salt, pepper and lemon juice. Mayonnaise is used for a binder.

For a good, substantial picnic sandwich try one cup cold minced chicken, ½ cup minced celery, 1 hard cooked egg, chopped, and mayonnaise to bind [illegible] dates, figs, raisins or prunes mixed with chopped peanuts and with the juice and grated rind of one orange as a binder is particularly delicious.

Chopped boiled ham combined with piccalilli and moistened with sweet cream or mild mayonnaise is good, and ½ cup of creamed cheese and ½ cup of stuffed olives chopped and mayonnaise to moisten is hard to improve on.

For parties rolled sandwiches are particularly dainty. To make these spread a damp towel on a bread board. Remove all crust from a loaf of bread and cut well buttered thin slices one at a time all the way around the loaf.

Spread with any desired paste. For a [illegible] attractive sandwich [illegible] in thirds or [illegible] with different colored fillings such as pimento and cream cheese for one combination and [illegible] mayonnaise for a next and cream cheese with stuffed olives for a third.

Then roll the bread up tightly as for a jelly roll, taking care to keep the roll tight at the start and pressing a little to make the roll stick together. Butter the ends to prevent its coming unrolled or drying out, and wrap tightly in a damp cloth. Just before serving cut in thin slices on the bias.

Open sandwiches are different and are made by piping a wall of cream cheese softened with mayonnaise or cream around the edge of fancy cut buttered bread slices and filling the center with jelly, jam or minced filling.

Yours for better sandwiches,
MARTHA LEE

What Determines Your Personality

By Beatrice Fairfax,
An authority on the Problems of Love and Marriage.

IS it better, as the poet claims, to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all?

This question, in various forms, recurs over and over in problems brought to my attention.

Much of youth is saddened by unrequited or lost love. At some period it comes into the experience of nearly everyone. Most men and women, it is true, recover in time from love that is not returned and find happiness and success in marriage. Only now and then do lasting tragedy and disaster result. But the experience of unrequited love is usually acutely unhappy while it lasts.

Some philosophers suggest forgetting as the remedy. This is especially maddening to the lovesick youth or girl who does not wish to forget, and invariably delights in clinging to grief and disappointment. The weakness in the counsel to forget lies in the fact that the effort of trying to forget a circumstance fixes it more firmly in memory. To try to forget is a good way to remember.

It seems to me, good sportsmanship is a requisite in winning or losing in love as in all other departments of life. Determine, if you must lose, to do so without whining or self-pity.

Of course, hopeless love hurts. But the history of humanity proves that a certain amount of suffering is inevitable if we are to grow learn and progress.

The other day a beautiful young woman, engaged to a young man deeply in love with her, eloped with another man.

"He has won a wonderful girl," was the only comment of the disappointed lover. There were no reproaches or recriminations. That man possesses the secret of ultimate success. He is a good loser.

Last season, a certain famous novelist fell deeply in love with a young lady of charm, wealth and exalted social position. For a time, the lady seemed to return his affection. Then quite suddenly she became engaged to an acquaintance they both knew well—a foreigner of title.

The novelist was hard-hit. He retired broken-hearted to his farm and fought his battle out with himself. Finally, he emerged from retirement his own cheerful self, announced that both young people were his good friends, and gave a charming party for them.

Girls are quite as capable as men of enduring the disappointments of love with courage and sportsmanship. It is useless to try to inveigle a man who has had every chance to become interested in you and has not responded to the opportunity. But there are other men—other worth-while delightful men. And unless you permit tears to blur your eyes, you will see in one of them your golden opportunity.

A girl I know was obliged recently to break her engagement. She is young and attractive, has a good home devoted brothers, sisters and parents. The man who asked her to release him was never really in love with her and is unworthy of her. Yet month after month, Doris has moped and wept and hoped she might go into a decline.

Fortunately, time is going to heal this hurt as it does nearly all wounds. Doris, in spite of herself, will begin to take a fresh interest in life—and men.

When you see a young woman with a new light in her eyes, buying a smart hat, trying the latest fashion in bobs—"perking up" in general—the chances are she is falling in love, taking a heart-break with sportsmanship and courage, or else just naturally getting over an unhappy love affair.

Physicians will tell you that their patients who recover quickest are those who are courageous and hopeful and want to get well.

Why should you pity yourself, even though your love is not returned? To love is in itself a joy. It is not wrong to love anyone in the world. But it is wrong to feel you have the right to wish or try to possess what you love. None can possess any other soul.

So let yourself love freely, generously, happily. Even broken-hearted love gives thrilling joy. Only when you love, do you really live.

Take the disappointments of love with sportsmanship and courage, and rejoice with all your heart and soul when it happens that your love is requited.

"You Said It, Marceline!"

By MARCELINE D'ALROY

WHAT would LIFE be like without men? Well, it seems worth THINKING about. It might be BETTER, but it would certainly be more DULL. It might be less EXACTING, but it would certainly be more EXASPERATING. For men are to life what SANTA CLAUS is to Christmas. It just would not be life WITHOUT them.

Of course, some of them sometimes seem more BOTHER than they are worth, but even the bother is often a JOY.

These United States are a WOMAN'S country. Here, everything, it seems, is for the WOMAN—including the MEN. Or that is how it appears to EUROPEAN women who come here.

In America there are MORE Santa Clauses per individual woman than in any country in the world. Consequently there are more GIFTS given to women; more PARTIES and more PLEASURE. Whether this is due to the goodness of men's HEARTS, or to the shrewdness of women's MINDS, or a combination of both, I am not certain. But I am certain of this, that American women have more LIBERTY, more leisure, and less hard LABOR than the great majority of French and English women.

The American man puts his wife on a pedestal, then goes out and WORKS like a DOG to keep her there. He is GENEROUS, tolerant, unexacting and UNSELFISH. But even at that he does not always keep his wife HAPPY.

American women are extremely INTERESTING because they seem at the same time to be the most PAMPERED, and yet apparently the most INDEPENDENT women in the world. It is they who lay down the LAWS in the home. They who DEMAND, and in no uncertain terms.

The American girl seems to be brought up with the idea that she has "to be PLEASED." The French girl, on the contrary, is brought up definitely to believe she has "to PLEASE." This makes the French girl more ADORABLE, the American girl more ADORED.

English men are still the big "I am" in the home, and out of it. English women are not specially ADORED, and not definitely adorable. They are RESPECTED, and often LOVED DEEPLY. But they have to take their share of the world's work without much RECOGGNITION.

There are FEWER Santa Clauses in ENGLAND than in the States. Perhaps the women there have spoiled the men. Certainly the men have not spoiled the women. They ask nothing but good SPORTSMANSHIP, and usually they GET it.

Frenchmen demand CHARM and intelligence in a sweetheart. CULTURE and efficiency in a wife. And they take a lot of pains to GET what they want.

American men seem to want YOUTH and BEAUTY in their sweethearts, and beauty and youth in their wives. They, too, get what they want, but they are made to PAY.

Adventure and Romance Amid Scenes of Almost Barbaric Splendor

CHAPTER 39.

I ordered Renchoro for the last time to make all speed and pack our goods securely and place them where they would be handy for removal should we be fortunate in boarding the steamer.

I fired a rifle twice to hasten back Peru and his intended, and they came running at top speed wanting to know what had happened. I told him, he was now all excitement packing up and leaving the tent standing, after telling Renchoro they were his to keep. We were soon all aboard. After jumping the breakers we quickly set sail and using both paddles and sail we were soon in sight of the big boat.

I fired a volley to call their attention and immediately the signal ran up. The vessel was now plainly visible. She had seen us and had changed her course to meet us. I told Renchoro I would leave him the boat and all on board it as he had been so faithful to me. I gave him a good hug. He said he would always help me if I ever returned.

I thanked him as we were now alongside all was ready for boarding Her. The vessel had now slowed up. I explained who we were and what we needed. Come on board I have good accommodations and as I am bound direct for Funchal Madeira you have just hit me in the right place.

Our luggage was soon aboard. Nina went first and her husband followed. I shouted best luck to my faithful boys who had been with me through hard Scenes. The boat swung clear. And the boys and Renchoro were still waving good luck as long as I could see them. I now joined my friends who were already in their cabin. Peru had engaged the small dining room, smoke room and two best cabins, which were delightfully situated and up to date in every way.

Who is that beautiful looking lady we have the pleasure of having as a passenger he asked. Well Captain she will be that fellows wife as soon as you can marry them. Here he laughed outright.

We sat down and he was still smiling. I took a french brandy with him and he told me to get ready it was a lucky event crossing the line he said. I then saw Peru and Nina and told them. Oh of course he said if the Captain would be so good.

The Captain and Mate Now Appeared With Books and Pens

The Capt. and mate now appeared with the necessary books and pens. I hurried Peru up and he appeared with the Bride who looked her best, they both came up smiling she wore a necklace of pearls with a beautiful diamond and emerald brooch. After the necessary documents had been signed the Captain pronounced the words love honour and obey. I translated for the bride whose English was risky and she answered I will. I signed as a witness the smiling mate followed suit and it was all over.

A legal marriage under the British flag said the good Capt. The mewing sea birds circled round and presently the brass bow gun boomed out, we were crossing the line the necessary marriage papers were made out (marriage certificates) and Peru and his Lady shook hands with the officers.

I told Peru, who was wearing his best smile not to forget the crew. Oh, of course not, he said, and handed me a roll of bank notes, you know all about these things so you must help me out. You have done splendidly.

I called the Captain and frankly told him what Peru had said. Oh the Captain said it is not really necessary, but give what you wish. I handed him a fifty for all hands. Oh, no, he said, quite out of the way ten will be ample. I made him accept twenty pounds, he called the steward and told him to share it out. And he thanked me on behalf of his crew.

We had the wedding breakfast and the good cook had not forgotten the cake, which we really enjoyed. Peru spent much of his time teaching his wife how to improve her writing and reading and we had many a good laugh at the comical words she would scribble, whilst she thoroughly enjoyed the fun. We had a trip to Madeira which was always full of enjoyable incidents.

We were all sorry when the good ship dropped anchor in Funchall and we had to part with our sailor friends.

We learnt that an American vessel bound for New Orleans would be due on the following day and would coal and provision and sail as soon as possible.

This was good news for the Newly Wed and Peru booked berths for himself and lady. He still was anxious for me to go with him to Peru this I told him was out of the question as I was answering a mothers call.

Peru Was Busy Telegraphing To His Guardian and Agent

Peru was busy telegraphing to his guardian and agent and it took him quite a time before he had finished his communications.

He explained to me what he intended to do on his return to his home in Lima. He had received a statement as to how he stood financially in fact he was far richer than ever he had imagined his interests amounted to several millions.

Of course I promised that I would visit him and his wife in Peru, but could not promise to stay with him for good as I intended if possible to do all I could to satisfy my people in business.

Nina would have nothing to do with the Ruby which was very valuable, in fact she believed it would be the cause of bad luck if she wore it, as she wanted to forget the life of anxiety she had lived as a godess.

In fact she begged me to accept the Stone and keep it from her sight for ever. She was happy as a woman could be and wanted to forget the days she had spent a Sacred prisoner. This of course she could forget and she was anxious to see her husbands native land where she wished to live and die in thorough happiness.

We enjoyed our stay in Funchal. And now came the time of our parting. The young people took their place aft close to the American flag. The last whistle now sounded and Peru gave me a heartbreaking squeeze I shall never forget whilst the Lady his wife, and who knows what her rightful title might be had her father lived she might have become a Dutchess or other crowned Person, showered me with hugs and kisses and overcome with emotion she fell in her husbands arms the silver tears falling as I hurriedly left.

On reaching the tender they were cast loose and I waved them adieu as long as I could see them. I felt I had lost my best friends in the world and hoped from my heart that dame fortune who had linked these two orphans together would be with them to the end in their home in the valley of the Andes.

And now Trader Horn, having finished his romantic story, wonders how the public will receive his work. He thus voices his thoughts to Mrs Lewis:

"Well, Ma'am, the finale at last I should like to know what impression it leaves on the reader . . .

"You think it up to the mark? You've been right through it, I suppose? Well, its a fait accompli at last.

To be concluded tomorrow.

Take Years Off An Aged Complexion

Women marvel at the result of daily using pure mercolized wax. How the soft, alluring beauty is uncovered and entire face looks many years younger. Applied to the face, neck and arms, nightly like a cold cream, it gently absorbs the aged faded skin in tiny particles, removing freckles, tan, and other blemishes. The loveliness of the youthful skin hidden beneath is then revealed in its clear, smooth, natural beauty. Mercolized wax brings out the hidden beauty. To remove wrinkles and restore the contour of youth, use as an astringent 1 ounce powdered saxolite and 1 half pint witch hazel. At all drug stores.

opulence then on its way to her.

After her return from the Pageant, she postponed the resumption of study a week or so longer while she summoned up sufficient courage to tell Brooks Ling what she desired to do, and ask his advice. This indeed required courage because," Dolly told Jerry, "he'll want to see some of my work, sure as Fate, and if he should say it wasn't any good and there wasn't any use for me to go on, I'd die."

But he said nothing of the kind.

At first when she brought him the sketches, he said nothing at all. He simply looked at them, and looked and looked, and said nothing. . . . . After aeons of time he met Dolly's frightened eyes, and smiled a little. "You have," he said simply. "You've got all the stuff. These are quite wonderful." And then, in a voice of alarm. "Don't—why, my dear child who should you cry?"

Later he said much more. All that afternoon, while he drew her, he talked. About lines. About curves. About blocking in a head and constructing a body. About his own artistic apprenticeship. About Hard Work, and what one must do and how she must feel.

Ever since then she had been going to the Art Students League five evenings weekly, and working harder than she had ever worked, and better. And glorifying in it. . . .

A full life, taken all in all. A breathless life and colorful. A life so new, so little related to the old era of time clocks and sales slips, of theater ticket stubs and paper drinking cups, that sometimes Dolly thought bewilderedly, "That must have been somebody else!" But she knew it had not been anybody else. Every time she passed the huge gray bulk of Gibson Brothers store she knew, by the queer sense of guilt, the playing hooky feeling she had. And whenever she saw "Gotham Theater" on a billboard or in a newspaper she knew, by the way the letters seemed to nod and [illegible] hello to her.

She sighed. "If I haven't a bow [illegible] with every [illegible] in New York before long, it [illegible]."

"I do my best," said Jerry modestly.

"[illegible] twenty five dollars!"

"You did [illegible]."

She [illegible] against his fur lapel. "[illegible] Jerry. Ten this morning [illegible] this afternoon." Her [illegible], begged his appreciation. "[illegible] a lot for me, and [illegible] glad."

"Of course. I think it's great. How'd you do it?"

She began the detailed resume upon which he always insisted. "Well this morning the Underwood Studio called me, and I went up there—I was there all morning. You have to wait so long at those places, you know. There's always a mob of models, men and girls, and you stand around and stand around.

"Finally they got to me about eleven thirty. I posed for three pictures — photographic illustrations — they're going to be used with a magazine story. One of them was of me alone sitting with my chin in my hand looking out of a window at the moon. And one was a party, eight of us at a dinner table. And in the third the handsome hero was kissing me over some banisters— What's the matter, Jerry?"

Jerry's encircling arm had stiffened perceptibly.

"I hate that," he said.

"I don't see why. It's just business."

She waited a moment and then, as Jerry kept silent, added, "Of course it doesn't mean anything."

His profile looked sulky and the line in his cheek was deep and definite. She [illegible] it with an experimental forefinger, but she could [illegible] a smile line. "Oh, Jerry," she said in exasperation, "[illegible] a goose?"

"Who's the fellow?" Jerry wanted to know.

"The one who posed with me?"

"The one who kissed you."

Ruth Elder to Make Film

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

(Copyright 1928 by Universal Service.)

LOS ANGELES June 1—Ruth Elder, aviatrix who occupied the newspapers so conspicuously a few months ago, is due in Hollywood in another eight weeks. Miss Elder sails for Europe June 8 and after a holiday abroad she will come here to keep a movie engagement.

It's no news that she has been officially nominated for the girl in "Glorifying the American Girl," but before Famous Players-Lasky give her this choice role she will support Richard Dix in one of his forthcoming pictures.

I had supposed that it might be "Redskin," but since that goes into production June 11 and Miss Elder will be on the high seas at that time the dates do not coincide so I suspect it will be the opera following "Redskin."

Richard Dix is a little behind in his schedule himself, having been sick for several months. In all likelihood he will probably begin on the screen play with Miss Elder just as soon as he finishes "Redskin."

THAT man about town Lew Cody has certain ideas on what he wants to play and why. That isn't anything unusual for most screen stars visualize themselves in some particular character. I hear that Lew would be willing to give at least two hours of his life if he could play in "A Single Man," the stage play in which Edward Everett Horton starred here in Hollywood.

Probably I should put it a little stronger in my statement and say that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is negotiating for the film rights of this comedy drama for Lew. Lew and Mabel Normand, by the way, continue to surprise everyone by living together in apparent felicity. At the time these two took the big step there were wagers that it wouldn't last. But you can never tell when people are going to be happy or unhappy in this Hollywood of ours.

* * *

I AM suspicious by nature. I have been deceived so many times, not by men but by stories. So when S. George Ullman let it be known that he was going to film "The Life of Valentino" I didn't take it seriously. Now I am told that Ullman would do so much to [illegible] business [illegible] wants Leroy Mason to play the role of Valentino.

Mason is now under contract to [illegible] playing opposite [illegible] have taken place [illegible] and Ullman with the [illegible] possible Mason may be [illegible].

[illegible] of Valentino I cannot help but express my opinion and say that there was absolutely no resemblance between [illegible] and Mason. But I am told that there will be no effort to engage a [illegible] who resembles Valentino. [illegible] it's just as well.

THE movies have done much for Fanny Hurst and other writers of her calibre. They have put money into their pocketbooks and given them a chance to display all their stories. Sometimes reading Fanny Hurst you cannot believe her tales will make screen romances. She is so essentially a stylist. Yet "Humoresque," by Fanny Hurst, is one of the best pictures [illegible].

Now, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have purchased "Breakers Ahead," a story of modern life and social conditions. So far no cast has been chosen and it has been given no director. But the big [illegible] is going to happen to [illegible] Miss Hurst was said to have sold both to United Artists and Tiffany-Stahl.

* * *

WE speak of the poster girl, the magazine cover beauty, but, so far as I know, Marion Davies is the first screen star to meet the name, cartoon girl. A little bit ambiguous you say. Well, perhaps so. But now it has been arranged that Marion is to film "Tillie the Toiler," heroine of one of the most popular comic strips in the country.

"[illegible]" follows "[illegible]," another lady who first came into being via the newspaper comics.

WALLACE BEERY'S most cherished dream is about to be realized. Not only is he getting out of slapstick comedy, but he's getting into serious drama with a vengeance. In "[illegible]" which from all accounts [illegible] plenty of excitement. [illegible] to ride [illegible] of a box car.

What could be more serious I ask you? And just by the way [illegible] the extra [illegible] the Mexican border, [illegible] company is [illegible] plane. It's [illegible] drama [illegible] constant attendance to [illegible] rough [illegible] ing an [illegible].

THEY were sitting at luncheon, the three of them, a young girl, an older woman and a [illegible] older woman. There [illegible] merriment at the table that people turned to look. Who are they, [illegible] and [illegible] asked. Who indeed [illegible] mother and [illegible] grandmother. [illegible] to them.

Shopping with Priscilla Price

She finds the unusual and tells of good values

THE MISTY SOFTNESS of wedding veils appeals to all of us. Even if we haven't a June bride in the family. There is a small shop here in town which is having a special "Bride-Time" sale on veils that are very beautiful. Orders are taken for veils also so you may have yours fashioned as you desire.

DAINTY BEYOND WORDS are Milady's hands. Soft and white with beautifully well-kept nails pink tipped like apple blossoms. That is, if she uses some delightful manicure products faithfully. Nicotine Remover is priced at $1 and removes all stubborn stains from your hands.

OF COURSE, by this time you have seen the diminutive little containers for concentrated perfume. They come in all odors and can be carried conveniently in your bag. Imported from France, they are priced at $1.

SOMEONE WROTE in asking for a waterproof rouge. There is an exquisite and natural waterproof rouge for cheeks and lips. It will not rub off and is absolutely pure and harmless. Price $1. At this season of the year Miss Modern begins to think of bathing and she does like to keep her fresh color, even though she dives and swims in the surf.

IT IS AT THIS TIME of year that folks begin to know trouble with their feet. Corns and callouses appear, varicose veins and shooting pains through the arch, which perhaps may mean fallen arches. It is well to know of a good foot specialist, who, for prices very reasonable, will give you treatment for corns and callouses, or sell you for $6.75 an almost invisible lightweight silk elastic stocking for varicose veins highly recommended by physicians.

YOUR GREATEST CHARM lies in a pure, fine skin. You may keep your skin as fair as your small sister if you use a Beauty Course, which will give you a wonderful natural complexion. There is a $5 demonstration facial connected with this which you may have for $2, and you'll be more than convinced of the merits of the course.

LOVELY IN THEIR COLORFUL allure are some dresses priced at $10. There are printed chiffons in every color, in designs from polka dots to large floral patterns and flat crepes in plain colors in tailored styles. Now is the time to get a supply of sport dresses, and there is a rare selection of them in all the pastel shades. There are party dresses, graduation dresses and dresses for proms and Junetime parties. Sizes 13 to 46.

ADORABLE IN their boxes and containers the color of the sky come some products I know. There is a face bath priced at $1.25, powder made of pure ingredients, and many others. Once you get acquainted with these products your nightly use of them will be a sacred rite.

Please enclose a 2c stamp with your name and address and I will send you information on the above items.

YOUNG "TERRORS"

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

YEARS ago, when I was just old enough to be sure I was not a child any longer and could look down from my lofty pinnacle of youth on "children," I remember hearing a mother say of her two sons, aged four and six, respectively: "Jack is such a good boy, but Jim is a terror. I can't do anything with him, and he has a terrible temper. I can tell Jack to do something and he will do it without a word, but Jim will ask me why he has to do it, and really 'talks back' to me as naughty as can be."

A few months ago I had occasion to see Jack and Jim, now grown men in the world of business. Jack is still "a good boy"—that is, if being meek, quiet and unobtrusive means being "good." He is an under clerk in a large corporation and the type of man whom, I imagine, his co-workers call a "yes" man when he is not around. He never flares up with righteous indignation, never gets "good and mad" and decides to forge out and get a better position. No, his mother raised the ideal before him from a wee baby that doing whatever the other fellow asked and doing it with a smile, even though the smile were forced, was being "good." So Jack looks at Brother Jim and shakes his head, believing that Jim got to the top by just sheer good luck and in spite of his terrible temper.

As a matter of fact, Jim didn't have a terrible temper when he was a child unless he was reasonably sure that what he wanted was right. Then he flared up and no one was left in doubt as to his opinions on the subject.

His mother could have taught him this kindly and wisely, but unfortunately she did not understand human nature well enough to do so. Jim undoubtedly learned it through cruel knocks. The lines about his mouth show that life hasn't been fearfully easy, but also engraved about his lips are lines which show control. He can blow your head off when he feels like it, but he doesn't do it unless he's given your whole case a fair hearing and you've got it coming to you.

He praises work well done and tells the workers in no uncertain terms what he thinks when it isn't well done.

Don't think your child is "good" merely because he is passive and meek. This is the easier type of child to bring up, to be sure, but the big promise of success and achievement in the world lies in your "problem" child, your child who insists upon expressing his own personality and who blazes up when he can't. Your job is, not to "break" or "conquer" him, as I have heard so many mothers firmly decide to do, but to teach him control of his emotions, remembering that the more pronounced and decided they are the more character is in the process of blooming into an individual whom people remember.

MEDITATIONS OF A WIFE

By HELEN ROWLAND.

THE beauty and value of "saving up for a rainy day" depends entirely on what you save.

* * *

What the average married couple appear to save for a rainy day is a lot of old grievances and grudges. Now that we have no attics in which to putter around, they dig down into the storehouse of their memories and bring up all the musty old dissensions for a good airing.

* * *

Not being able to get any outdoor exercise, they take their daily dozen arguments indoors, just for the practice.

* * *

Many a long, rainy Sunday ends in a woman going upstairs to drown her sorrows in tears over her old love letters and a man going to the cellar to drown his troubles in something more potent, over the furnace.

* * *

A rainy day is the supreme test of love! It is easy for two fairly compatible people to be the best of comrades, with half the city to separate them from 9 to 5. But for an acid test of real companionship, try 24 hours of enforced clubbiness.

* * *

Every normal wife dreads the long rainy day during her husband's vacation, when he can't get out to the golf links, or even to prune the roses and muss up the front yard. It always means mussing up the house, turning the sitting room into a laboratory, pulling the plumbing to pieces or taking the radio apart.

* * *

A man simply MUST be amused! And if he hasn't got a set of golf clubs, an automobile or the baby's Christmas toys to play with, he develops into a master mechanic and goes around "fixing" things.

* * *

Or, if he hasn't the mechanical urge, he will elect himself "efficiency expert" and prowl around, finding out things about the housekeeping which he never suspected and which might otherwise have been concealed from him for a lifetime; such as that you don't make a list of the laundry, that you throw away the outside lettuce leaves, and that you have 14 hats and a dozen pairs of shoes in the closet.

Or, worse still, he may be the "helpful" kind who insists on puttering around the kitchen and showing you "how easy it is to do it" by smoking up the kitchen and leaving a trail of crumbs and bacon grease from the back piazza to the front hall.

Nine divorces out of ten might be traced back to a long series of rainy holidays! Lots of perfectly good marriages that sailed along serenely while the subway separated two people for six days in the week have gone to pieces on the rock of a "rainy day."

* * *

Oh, yes! What a woman ought to lay aside for a "rainy day" is a lot of patience and forbearance, and plenty of old and useless household implements for a man to PLAY with!

* * *

It takes two souls ABSOLUTELY in TUNE to weather a rainy day together without foundering either on the Scylla of a woman's nerves or the Charybdis of a man's restlessness. THAT is being "truly mated."

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

THERE are a host of causes to assign
For failure and mistake,
Not easily can any man resign
The plan he joyed to make.

And so he blames the day or wind or crowd,
His helpers or his foes;
But not himself; his stubborn will is proud,
Still unconvinced he goes.

It is a wiser way to seek the flaw
That lay, unguessed, within
To mar the perfect working of the law
Whereunder each may win.

Within, alone, lie all the faults that turn
Man's feet down failure's maze;
Within lie, too, the splendid traits that spurn
The path for better ways.

SOCIAL PESTS

By LUCY LOWELL.

ARE folks who write the only ones to go around with frayed nerves and wasted energies because of folks with small respect for working hour?

Life is a burden to most writers because of the relatives and friends, the acquaintances and casuals who drop in "for just a minute, you know—wouldn't think of disturbing you——" I know, I've heard their wails and waxed indignant with and for them. I have wailed myself, long and loud. Also I've tacked a "No Admittance" sign on my studio door and grabbed out the telephone. And still they come.

But, after all, writers are comparatively few. How about others?

How about YOU?

Are YOU bothered endlessly by folks less busy than yourself, who seem to think that because they wish to knock off for an hours' chat you can put aside everything and chat with them?

Lucy Lowell will be delighted to read what you have to write on this subject and to pass along your experiences to other readers.

How YOU manage to keep your work hours free from sociability so you may use them as you intended; what methods YOU employ for discouraging well-meant but time-wasting visiting when you ought to be busy; how YOUR friends take it when you tell them you've got to get back to the job—if you do tell them—whether that job is painting a picture, giving a lecture, mowing the lawn or baking a loaf of bread.

Sociability is important; friendliness is one of the reasons a lot of us have for living.

But work, too, is essential, and lives should be arranged so these do not interfere with each other.

Please write me how YOU manage.

Dated June 1, 1928 Due June 1, 1958

Sinking Fund sufficient to retire entire issue by maturity

Principal and interest payable at the offices of Lee, Higginson & Co. in Boston, New York or Chicago in United States gold coin without deduction for any German taxes present or future. Callable for sinking fund upon 30 days' notice on June 1 in each year and callable as a whole at any time or in part on any interest date on and after June 1, 1933 upon 3 months' notice, at par and accrued interest in each case.

Not callable prior to June 1, 1933 except for Sinking Fund

LEE, HIGGINSON TRUST COMPANY, BOSTON, Trustee

Messrs. Rudolf von Bitter and Dr. Bruno Walter, Managing Directors of the Central Bank of German State & Provincial Banks, Inc. (Deutsche Landesbankenzentrale A. G.) Central Agent for the participating German Provincial and Communal Banks, summarize their letter to us as follows:

THE CONSOLIDATED LOAN AND ITS PURPOSE: This Loan is being issued as part of a national program for improving agricultural conditions in Germany. The proceeds will be advanced to farmers for the purpose of enabling them to fund their short term indebtedness, to reduce materially their interest charges and generally to further agricultural development. To accomplish this purpose fourteen Provincial and Communal Banks are participating in the operation of contracting this Loan and of relending its proceeds to farmers.

SECURITY: These Bonds are the direct obligation of fourteen Provincial and Communal Banks of Germany each of which is responsible for a part of the service on each Bond proportionate to its share of the total proceeds of this Loan. Each Provincial Bank is owned in whole or in part by a Province and each such Province is legally responsible for all obligations of its Bank. As specific evidence of this responsibility and as further security for this Loan each Province will execute and deposit with Lee, Higginson Trust Company, as Trustee, a bond promising to pay any amount due and unpaid by its Provincial Bank on the Bonds now being offered for sale. The Communal Banks are themselves public bodies which can initiate steps to secure necessary revenues through the medium of taxation. In the case of both Provincial and Communal Banks, therefore, ultimate recourse to taxing power exists.

METHOD OF EXTENDING LOANS TO FARMERS: A supervisory organization will be established for the district in which each Bank is to distribute the proceeds of this Loan. The members of this organization will include representatives of agriculture, commerce and local banks and one representative of the Reich and one of the State in which the loans are extended. No farmer will be granted a loan (unless secured by a first mortgage on his farm for not more than 40% of its value) until his application has been approved by the proper supervisory organization.

It is intended in general to have loans secured individually by farm mortgages the amount of which together with any prior mortgages will not, in any event, be more than 60% of the value of land and improvements. Other security or guarantees may be accepted however, subject to official regulations, if specifically approved by the proper supervisory organization.

SINKING FUND: The Bonds will be entitled to the benefit of a cumulative Sinking Fund calculated to be sufficient to retire all the Bonds of this Series by maturity.

Application will be made to list these Bonds on the New York Stock Exchange

Price 97½ and accrued interest to yield about 6.70%

Of these Bonds $1,000,000 have been purchased by Higginson & Co. for sale in Great Britain; $1,500,000 have been withdrawn by Mendelssohn & Co., Nederlandsche Handel-Maatschappij, Pierson & Co., and R. Mees & Zoonen for sale in The Netherlands; $1,000,000 by Credit Suisse for sale in Switzerland, and $500,000 by Skandinaviska Kreditaktiebolaget for sale in Sweden.

CAPITALISM ON WAY TO SUICIDE, SAYS SHAW

By B. C. FORBES

George Bernard Shaw has drawn up his "last will and testament to humanity," a 493-page volume devoted mainly to capitalistic and socialistic subjects. America and some of her ways are not spared by this unique Irish atheist, socialist, satirists and other "ists."

B. C. Forbes

His oracular pronouncements are certain to attract very widespread attention and to incite widespread discussion. Let us, therefore, get acquainted with his pungent comments on subjects affecting capital, industry, banking, business.

"Spare money," is Shaw's rather apt definition of capital. This "spare money," or capital, he says, "is the money you have left when you have bought everything you need to keep you becomingly in your station. To be a capitalist, therefore, you must have more than enough to live on. Consequently, a poor person is one who has less than enough to live on.

Then he expatiates thuswise: "Capital cannot be saved because money is only a legal claim to goods, chiefly food and clothing, which are perishable. Saving is only making bargains for the future; what one person cannot or does not consume today is lent to another who promises to replace it in the future, consuming it immediately." Capital is essential to civilization, but its "private appropriation perverts the order of its application," so that luxury trades yield profits while the wants of those in need are neglected.

Remember, of course, that Shaw is an out-and-out Socialist. Indeed, the title of this "last will and testament" is "The Intelligent Woman's Guide to Socialism and Capitalism" —published in this country today (Friday) by Brentano's.

Both America and Britain lend money freely to other countries. Shaw disapproves of sending money to foreign countries to develop their industry and natural resources. Why?

He recognizes that profits may be large but claims that the borrowers, by supplying the lenders with food and other goods in order to meet the interest on the loans, really work for the lending nation and cause that nation to take life easy, to its own detriment. As a penalty, industries are likely to shut down, unemployment and extravagance assume huge proportions, and the lending nation may decay, like the Roman Empire, through becoming idle and "soft."

* * *

This view doubtless will be scoffed at in this country. But when you take a long look ahead, you realize that Americans, when they have almost every nation on the face of the earth paying them abundant tribute, will have to exercise ceaseless vigilance to guard against becoming lazy, self-indulgent, "soft." We see how often individual wealth dulls the edge of a man's industry. And nations are but aggregations of individuals.

The largest bank in the United States announced the other day a plan to lend money at the comparatively low rate of 6 per cent to salaried and other employes not able to give security in the form of property or stocks or bonds or other collateral. And this example promises to spread rapidly.

Shaw condemns bankers for lending funds only to those seeking huge amounts and able to present adequate security, while small business men, needing small sums, must often pay exorbitant rates to money lenders, he declares, because banks will not accommodate them.

Well, America is energetically seeking to remedy that situation.

Real credit, according to the Shavian philosophy, "is only the lender's opinion that the borrower will be able to repay him." He deplores the prevalent idea that credit is something "that can be eaten and drunk and worn and made into railways and houses and factories." He attributes the "widespread ruin in Europe," following the war, to the bad advice of bankers who "did not understand the rudiments of their business, and persist in reasoning on the assumption that spent capital still exists and that credit is something solid."

Shaw advocates the nationalization of banks as well as everything else. His wife being a bank shareholder, however, he urges compensation instead of confiscation, otherwise "we might have to cut down our household expenses."

* * *

"Gambling" on stock exchanges comes under condemnation. It adds nothing to the wealth of the speculating countries, whereas, says Shaw, "the human energy, audacity, and cunning wasted on it would, if rightly directed, make an end of our slums and epidemics and most of our prisons in fewer hours than it has taken days of capitalism to produce them."

* * *

He consoles himself, however, with the thought that capitalism is committing suicide.

Is this true of American capitalists, American industrialists, American bankers, American business men?

about bootleg whiskey in addition to making it a source of revenue to bootleggers, enforcement agents and politicians.

H. E. Mitchell's "Sentinel" at Bemidji, Minn., wins the prize as best weekly in the national editorial contest. This is a good time to remind the public in general, and national advertisers in particular, that country weekly newspapers are the most important organs of public opinion and protectors of public welfare.

And their advertising value, per mill line, is not exceeded by any publication of any kind.

The reader of a country weekly buys everything from shingles on the roof to cement in the cellar floor, and every advertiser has in him a possible customer.

Seven Congressmen went from Washington to Lakehurst yesterday in two army airplanes, then boarded the dirigible Los Angeles for a sample flight.

It is important for law-makers to know exactly what the dirigible can do. Germans are building a lighter-than-air ship, expected to go around the world in twelve days with only two stops.

This country is building an all-metal dirigible, to be safe against lightning, dirigibles' greatest danger.

NEW BUILDING REACHES RECORD FOR ALL TIME

New construction contracts in New England for the last reported week, ended May 29, set a new high record for the like week for all time. The average for past weeks this year was $9,640,300. F. W. Dodge Corporation compilation shows contracts for last week were $13,423,300. Only in 1925 has the $10,000,000 mark ever been crossed for the reported week.

DAMP WEATHER ADDS TO MOULD

when mouldy, are positively unusable, because the taint of the mould rapidly works throughout the flesh.

Smoked ham, on the other hand, need not be thrown away, because of the presence of a surface mould for this may be wiped off carefully with a cloth, and the ham cooked as usual.

The common moulds on bread, are the white, green and black mould. While these moulds may not be injurious to health, they cause damage to the bread in that they rob it of nourishment and make it unpalatable.

I remember one instance of a householder who brought to my office a dish of boiled rice, which he had placed a day or so before in his ice chest. The entire surface of the rice was covered with the most remarkable growth of pink whiskers.

He was immensely startled to think that an innocent looking dish of rice contained such alarming possibilities. It was the more puzzling to him that he knew the rice had been boiled for some hours and that had such a condition been present, the food must have been sterilized.

Thereupon it was explained to him that the red growth was the development of a minute plant which rejoiced in the long name of prodigiosa. Further, that it undoubtedly had come in contact with the rice after cooking, and its rapid growth was stimulated by the dampness of the ice chest.

Housekeepers are advised to CLEAN THEIR BREAD and CAKE BOXES FREQUENTLY, and from time to time EXPOSE them to SUNLIGHT and DRY AIR to keep down moulds.

Likewise great care should be taken concerning ice chests. They should be kept scrupulously clean, and foodstuffs that have become affected with mould should be removed immediately to avoid further contamination of other articles.

Why Do Women Marry?

They Want to Hear All About Themselves

Women today are receiving higher salaries than ever before in their existence. The following letter is from a woman worker, who says that she "is making a pretty good living," and asks advice as to whether she should give up her position and her independence and get married. She writes:

"I have two married sisters—and I know that both envy me my freedom and easy life, if the truth were told.

"They have the worry and care of children, and they have to bear their husband's worries as well as their husband's children.

"When my work is done, it really is done. My time belongs to me, and I do what I like.

"Their work and worries are never ended. It is the house, or the bills, or the children. Always some one sick or something they need.

"I know you advise all women and all men to marry. But is not that just general good, moral advice?

"TWENTY-SIX YEARS OLD."

Young woman, WE DON'T CONTROL OURSELVES IN THIS WORLD.

If we DID manage ourselves entirely it would be a much colder, more selfish world than it is. Very likely marriages would be less numerous. People living alone, and thinking of themselves only, would be plentiful.

But men and women are put here on earth ALREADY WOUND UP.

We have to run in a certain way, obedient to our winding. And the Wisdom that winds us is very high and very pure wisdom.

Men and women marry because THEY HAVE TO. That's the real answer to your question.

A married woman with babies is a REAL woman. Others are NOT REAL.

What do you think of a man that does not work, and that does not want to work?

The woman that does not want to marry and to care for children is the wrong kind of a woman, as the idle man is the wrong kind of man.

We can tell you the answer to a much more difficult question than yours. The question is:

"Why do women consent to marry men who—as a rule—are not at all worthy of their good luck?"

Women marry men chiefly because THEY WANT TO KNOW ABOUT THEMSELVES.

Women have not the faculty of INTERPRETING themselves TO themselves.

A very plain little man in Shakespeare's day boasted that with ten minutes' start he could so interest a woman that the handsomest man in London could not attract her for a second.

What he said was true.

His secret—although he kept it to himself—was very simple.

He told the woman the things she wanted to know about HERSELF. When the handsomer man came along and wanted to talk about HIMSELF—he was not listened to.

Young men may remember for their guidance that the important thing is to study the young woman's character—ability, talents, fine qualities, etc.—and then give the young woman the results of the investigation.

You see, women cannot yet produce actual high-class work such as men produce. They have in them qualities far higher than men's qualities. But these only show in their sons. Lincoln's mother was greater than Lincoln. The creator is greater than the created. But she did not know it. She did not get the applause of the crowd, the votes of the millions.

What she needed, and probably never got, was the kind of man that would have understood her greatness and told her about it.

Nancy Hanks was her name, and she was about six feet tall and very homely.

But the right man could have told her that her big hands were proof of mental power. He could have told her that the fierce character which, perhaps, made neighbors afraid of her was a fine thing—an indication of power that her son would inherit. She would have liked such a man and gone a long way to please him.

Woman's real qualities are revealed ONLY IN HER CHILDREN.

The real kind of a woman is only REALLY happy when she has sons and daughters that tell her WHAT SHE IS. and that combine with her own good qualities the best qualities of the man she cares for.

Naturally a woman's liking for the admirer and future husband comes first.

While waiting for healthy, clear-eyed children to sing her praises and PROVE her worth, she likes to have around an intelligent man that can guess those qualities and describe them well.

Women marry because they must—nature makes plans and they are obeyed. They are not forced upon the UNFIT—which explains the existence of voluntary old maids and bachelors.

Our letter writer, Miss Twenty-Six, is taking notice, and although she does not know it, there probably is not far from her the person who will marry her and make her working hours irregular.

She will be glad that happened when a small, wrinkled human being about ten minutes old is handed to her, nicely washed, with a little white dress on—looking extremely ugly to all the rest of the world, but wonderfully beautiful to her.

THERE IS ONE TEST FOR EVERY SCHEME

By DR. FRANK CRANE

OUT in California the doings of two alleged Hindoos have been investigated, and while the results of the investigation make good newspaper copy, the effect upon the public mind is not very satisfactory.

These Hindoos profess to teach a profound wisdom and the science of God, under cover of which it is insinuated they are making money and disrupting homes.

One enraged husband, not satisfied with the treatment his wife was getting from the Yogis, socked one of them on the jaw.

Over in China they have groups of bandits who style themselves brothers of the white lily or members of the brotherhood of universal love, or something of that kind, and who are engaged in murder, pillage and robbery.

It seems strange that some of the most nefarious actions are cloaked with a semblance of a devotion to God. In former times they used to torture heretics, fill their ears with hot lead and otherwise maim them, all in the name of religion.

There is one test for every scheme, no matter how high sounding or appealing it may be, no matter whether it advertises itself to be for the love of God or not. That test is the humanities.

Does a thing help men and women or does it deprive them of their liberties, outrage their bodies and inflict upon them torture?

The test of everything is how it affects human beings.

No matter how high sounding or divine a scheme may be, if the eventual effect of it is to extort money, to offend the sense of decency, or otherwise to inflict injury upon people, the scheme will not stand.

The humanities after all are the final test.

The best proof of the authority of Christ is the fact that when His teachings are obeyed and followed in the letter and in the spirit people's condition is improved. It makes them better members of the family and better citizens.

If the result were to stultify human beings, no amount of argument could buttress those teachings.

If a person is torturing a child or robbing a man or insulting a woman all in the name of God, then his idea of God is wrong.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

AL'S one of those gawky, quiet youngsters of 19 who sit around trying to figure things out. You don't hear much of such youngsters, with all this hallabaloo about Flaming Youth, but the woods are full of them. Wondering what it's all about. Why things are such a mess—why people can't get together and straighten things out—

"Life is sure a funny thing, isn't it, Miss Robinson? writes Al. "It sure gets my goat when I think about it. They tell me this ought to be the happiest time of my life, but I don't see it. Do you suppose there are really any happy people in the world?"

Yes, Al, there are. But you'll never be one of them.

IF YOU'RE SMART ENOUGH TO THINK ABOUT LIFE, YOU'LL NEVER BE ABLE TO ENJOY IT 100 PER CENT.

That's the price we pay for intelligence.

There are people who do enjoy life. Its mysteries never worry them—its cruelty never angers them. They never think about such things. They just think about themselves. What they will eat and what they will wear, where they will live, who they will love and what make of car they want.

If people like that have money enough to buy what they want, they are perfecty happy. They are healthy animals, and if they had to pass an intelligence test, they'd probably have nothing on guinea pigs.

If happiness like that would suit you, Al, you could find it. But happiness like that will never suit you, for you're not just a healthy animal—you're a healthy animal PLUS a brain. And you must pay a heavy price for that brain.

All your life it will be a restless spirit, twisting back and forth inside your skull. It will help you to see more beauty than sluggish men can ever see, but it will also make you see more ugliness.

It will satisfy you with great rewards—but it will also make you dissatisfied with common pleasures.

It will sometimes make you ridiculous—people will say you're queer. It will always make you restless and lonely and a little miserable. But it will be worth it!

NO MATTER WHAT IT COSTS, IT IS A GREAT THING TO HAVE A BRAIN.

And sometimes, when you're weary of thinking, and discouraged because thinking doesn't get you anywhere—

BRAINS COME HIGH BUT THEY'RE WORTH IT
ELSIE

remember this, Al. You are really not alone, although you may seem to be. You are part of a great company who have suffered and sought as you are doing, and you are carrying on their work.

They are the ones who have led humanity down out of trees and caves and up out of holes. They did the thinking for the litter, and they had a hard time doing it. They did not know happiness, either, but they knew pride. And even when they were roasting at stakes or dying on crosses, as they often did, I am sure they were willing to pay the price for the power to think.

So go on thinking, son. Don't let them laugh or scare you out of it. And don't flinch from paying the price. Good things come high.

New York Day by Day
by
O.O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, June 1—Thoughts while strolling: Nothing makes a woman look so coarse as hennaed hair. Basil Woon, the globe trotting author. The Algonquinites discover Joe Cook again this season. Most of us cheered him 10 years ago. John V. A. Weaver, a Charlotte, N. C., boy, who made good in the city.

That song, "Why Do You Love Me?" running through my head all day. Senility, I suppose—me and Trader Horn. Frank V. Storr's blue collars. The famous Belle Livingston. Five-dollar shoes, $3 hats—looks like a return to good old days. Bamboo cane twirlers. And mustache fixers.

Rita Weiman and her husband. Not so much talk about John Gilbert anymore. The noonday tableaux and fast parades. The "Dog Beauty Parlor." Horsey gentlemen with binoculars off for the tracks. The shimmering heat from the asphalt. Regina Wallace.

The rubberneck busses take their stands. More toothpicks in Times Square than in all Kalamazoo. The hotel that takes care of motorcycles free. Curb philosophers who know all the answers. A wild, careening mail truck, but the police seem to look the other way.

Noon "Ex-tree!" Broadway early risers who get up at midday. The old lion tamer with a chewed ear who peddles soap at dressing-room doors. Earl Carroll's brother Jim. Still another "Ex-tree!" A sudden shower splashing and spurting like dancing needles. And Broadway clots under canopies.

Umbrella sellers swarm magically from everywhere. Policemen don their raincoats. Business comes to a sudden standstill. Irene Hayes and her new husband. Men covered with newspapers rush across the street amid good natured jeers. And the sun pops out.

A lavender cabriolet. The jazz whine from up-stairs dance schools. They begin dancing at noon. Fat men. Lean men. And dwarfs. What's become of warts? The mid-afternoon calm. You can even hear the sparrows chirp. Waitresses relax and read the tabloids. A fitting name—the Cold Gray Dawn club.

AMONG the newest of New York nuisances are self-appointed carriage starters who patrol crowded motor traffic centers. They rush out to open the door and wait to assist you into the car. Their services are an annoyance, but unless you tip them they slam the door and bestow an appropriate epithet. In instances they have broken glass windows and painfully tweaked fingers in suddenly slammed doors. In the 40's, where cars of theater-goers are parked, they are particularly aggressive and insolent. Some even wear a nickel badge to give an official importance. Their profits are said to be as high as $10 a night.

NEW YORKERS quail before threats of tip grafters as people no place else in the world. I saw a hat snatcher follow a patron to the exit of a cafe the other evening to remind him he had forgotten something, and he was handed a quarter instead of a paste in the eye.

THE consuming fear of being classed a cheap-skate is peculiar to Broadway more than any other section of the town. There is said to be a secret agreement among those whose earnings are chiefly tips to maintain a strict silence when the regulation 10 per cent tip is offered. It is because of this there is little 10 per cent tipping any more. Twenty per cent is about the regular fee.

THE men who come the nearest to keeping the tip down to the regulation 10 per cent are almost invariably the extremely rich.

A post card signed L. T. F. reads: "I saw you on 49th street wearing a suit that retained the best qualities of a horse blanket and a Navajo rug. Where in the world did you get it?"

I won't tell, but I am learning to play the banjo that went with it.

not changed in his sympathy for children.

This is a "baseball field," THE REGULAR PLAYGROUND OF THOUSANDS OF CHILDREN, and it shows what kind of a civilization ours is.

We live in a CHRISTIAN age. The Founder of Christianity said:

"Suffer little children to come unto Me, and forbid them not; for of such is the Kingdom of God."

That was said with love for children. It did not mean that little children should enter the Kingdom of Heaven by way of the cobblestones and the wheels of a truck.

But that is exactly how a certain prosperous kind of Christianity interprets that Divine command.

"Children should not be allowed to play in the streets," is the answer this picture will bring from many that see it.
